WASHINGTON CITY.

In Committee.

Washington, Jan 26.—The Senate finance committee were mainly occupied with Sherman's bill relative to national bank receivers and bankruptcy proceedings but its consideration was not concluded. The committee also had up Conkling's bill on the same general subject.

The Senate committee on appropriations heard Commissioners Dennison Ketcham and Phelps on the subject of the payment of interest on the 3-65 District of Columbia bonds, the question being whether the United States should make an appropriation directly or require the district authorities to pay the interest now and to look to the Federal government for an appropriation to make good any possible deficit in the District revenues hereafter. No action was taken.

The House committee on Judiciary have agreed to report a bill allowing criminals in criminal cases to testify in their own behalf.

The Senate finance committee have agreed to recommend the confirmation of J. M. McGrew as auditor of the postoffice department.

Morton said his health was in such condition that he would not be able to continue his remarks to-day.

Bill to Reorganize the Judiciary.

Representative Knott of Kentucky, reported from the committee on the Judiciary a bill to reorganize the judiciary of the United States. The main features of the bill were as follows. The circuit court shall be held in each judicial district of the United States at the same time and place at which the district court shall or may be held and such circuit court is established in every district where no such court now exists and shall belong to the circuit in the territorial limits of which it is embraced. The several circuit courts shall have and exercise no jurisdiction in cases of appeal, or writs of error allowed taken or issued out after the 1st day of September 1876, but writs of error, appeals and reviews in bankruptcy cases may be had as heretofore provided there is established in each circuit a court of appeals with appellate jurisdiction of all cases arising in the several circuit and district courts. The Justice of the supreme court assigned to the circuit the circuit judge and the several district judges of the district composing the circuit shall be the judges of the court of appeals. No judge who has heard the cause in court below shall sit in the court of appeals upon the hearing of the same case or be consulted or give any opinion to other judges in relation thereto. The court of appeals shall also be a court of record. The decision of the court of appeals upon questions of law shall in all cases except as provided be final and conclusive but an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court. Appeals in chancery shall be allowed from the court of appeals to the Supreme Court in cases where the matter in controversy exceeds $10,000 in the manner now provided by law for directing appeals in like cases from the circuit court. The Chief Justice and the other justices of the Supreme Court may attend any term of the circuit or district court within his circuit and when so attending shall sit in and preside over the court.

Important Land Cases.

Washington, Jan 26.—In the case of Rancho Vallecitos de San Marcos California for which application has been made for a patent by Lorenzo Soto the title was confirmed. The general land office has instructed the surveyor general to notify the parties interested that they will be allowed 60 days from date of notice to produce evidence tending to show the location of calls of grants on the earth's surface and at the end of that time if no sufficient proof of such location be filed, he shall cause an examination to be made in the field and furnish the land office with an exhibit thereof for the settlement of the case.

The general land office sent to the surveyor general at San Francisco to-day the patent dated Jan 21 1876 in favor of Henry D. McCobb for a California private land claim—Carrol de Tierra—containing 413 477 acres.

Naval Investigations.

Chicago Jan 26.—The Times Washington special says Congressman Goode was before the committee on naval affairs yesterday and told what he knew about Robeson's rascalities in his district and the committee felt convinced that his charges were authentic. He resides in Norfolk district where the alleged frauds were practiced and brings testimony to substantiate all the charges. A committee of three members was appointed to go to Norfolk and investigate. Mr Goode among other things, informed the committee that the Republican party at Norfolk had manipulated matters at the navy yard so as to make them subserve party purposes. On election days they would collect a large number of men at the yard and tell them if they voted the Republican ticket they could have employment. The appointment of men at the navy yard he says came from the Republican executive committee and not from the commandant at the yard. For some time before and on election days as many as 1,400 men have been given employment at the yard with no ... occasion for their services but simply to obtain their votes. After the elections are over and the votes of the employes are not wanted the ... are largely discharged and the number is reduced ... one half. In addition to this the employes at the navy yard are required to submit to a pecuniary assessment for the benefit of the Republican party and if they do not they must forfeit their places in the yard.

Reciprocity Treaties.

Four commercial treaties are talked of in Congress and two are now under consideration. They are with Canada, the Hawaiian Islands, Cuba and Mexico. Three commissioners are here pressing the Canada treaty and they have a very earnest advocate in Ward of New York of the House committee. The committee has given the subject consideration enough to direct a sub committee to prepare a report. The ways and means committee commenced anew the consideration of the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty. The greatest objections to the treaty are the sugar interests. The contest is between San Francisco and New Orleans sugar markets. The proposed treaties with Cuba and Mexico are the subject only of speculative discussion.

Tenure of the Presidential Office.

Washington Jan 26.—Several days ago the House committee on judiciary reported the proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States as follows: "No person who has held or may hereafter hold, the office of President shall ever again be eligible to the same office." To-day Mr Frye in behalf of the minority of the committee proposed a substitute for the majority report as follows: "From and after March 4 1885 the term of office of the President and Vice President of the United States shall be six years and any person having been elected to hold the office of President or who for two years has held the office shall be ineligible to re-election."

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senate.

Washington Jan 26.—The chair laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury in response to the resolution of the 24th inst. inclosing a report of the action taken by him in regard to the collection of money due the United States by the Pacific railroad companies. Ordered to be printed and lie on the table.

West presented a memorial signed by several members of the State senate of Louisiana in reference to the credentials of Eustis claiming a seat as U. S. Senator from that State. West said he presented the memorial on behalf of Eustis and asked that it be referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

Allison called up the House bill transferring the custody of certain Indian trust funds from the Secretary of the Interior to the Treasury of the United States. Passed.

Howe from the judiciary committee reported favorably on the House bill to amend the revised statutes of the United States relating to naturalization. Passed.

Morrill from the committee on appropriations reported with an amendment the House joint resolution directing the commissioners of the District of Columbia to pay the interest on the 3-65 bonds under the act of June 20, 1874, placed on the calendar.

Morrill gave notice he would call up the joint resolution to-morrow for action as it was necessary the appropriations should be made before the end of this month in order to meet the obligations of the Government falling due on the 1st of February.

West submitted a resolution requesting the Secretary of the treasury to submit to the Senate copies of any proposition made by the Pacific Railroad Companies for the creation of a sinking fund for the redemption of the Government mortgages together with a statement of the action of the Government thereon and of the reason therefor.

The morning hour having expired the chair laid before the Senate the unfinished business being the bill to confirm pre-emption and homestead entries of public lands within the limits of railroad grants in cases where the entries had been made under the regulations of the land department.

Christiancy moved that the bill be referred to the judiciary committee.

Bogy said Congress might pass this bill to enable these settlers to get their lands but the railroad companies would contest the right and would be successful in ousting them. He believed a law could be framed to avoid all this and he hoped it would be referred to the judiciary committee to be perfected.

Sherman said this was really a conflict between railroad grants and grants made to pre-emption and homestead settlers. It affected millions of people in the Western States. He had heard of complaints growing out of doubts as to the rights of settlers. The most marked case he knew of was one which occurred in Iowa where great numbers of settlers were deprived of their homes without any shadow of justice. He was in favor of giving to the settlers a patent of the United States where their claims were in pursuance of the pre-emption and homestead law. Congress never intended that the railroad companies should have title to any land rightfully held by settlers. He thought this bill was an assertion of the power of Congress and Congress had the power to protect the rights of those claimants who acquired their claims under the authority of law. It would be doing a simple act of justice to refer the bill to the judiciary committee.

Morrill of Vermont said in one instance Congress had been compelled to pass a law giving ... the amount of land formerly held by them where they had been ousted by the railroad companies. He referred to decisions of the land office and the Interior Department and said he would like to know what the Commissioner of the General Land Office had to say of his decisions which involved Congress in this difficulty. There must have been gross neglect of duty on the part of the Commissioner of Public Lands to cause this difficulty. He (Morrill) desired to have the bill so perfected that no claim should come to Congress from railroads to make good claims made by them for lands given to settlers.

Frelinghuysen said it was brought before Congress all the grants made by the United States. All his prejudices were favorable to settlers but he did not think this bill perfect. He hoped it would be made the special order for some day next week so that Senators might have an opportunity to look into this bill. It might have an effect upon a very important suit now pending and certainly Congress did not want to interfere with questions now pending before the courts.

Boutwell spoke in favor of referring the bill to the judiciary committee and believed the committee could report a bill by which the Attorney General could be authorized to proceed against the railroad companies and have declared all patents invalid issued to them without authority of law.

After further discussion by Harvey, Sargent, McMillan, Ingalls, Morton, Wright, Bogy and Hitchcock the motion of Christiancy to refer the bill to the judiciary committee was rejected.

Howe moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The House bill relating to the centennial celebration of American Independence was referred to the committee on appropriations.

The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

House.

Clark from the committee on postoffices and post roads called up the bill regulating postage on 3d class mail matter. It provides that all mailable matter of the 3d class referred to in sections 3878 and 3911 of the revised statutes may weigh not exceeding four pounds for each package and that the postage thereon shall be one cent for every two ounces or fraction thereof. Clark explained that this bill proposed to repeal the law passed in the last hours of the last session in form of an amendment inserted obscurely in the sundry civil appropriations bill with evident intention of misleading the House, that law increased the postage on 3d class mail matter from 1 cent per 2 ounces to 1 cent per ounce, or from 8 cents to 16 cents per pound. This bill proposed to reinstate the postage on 3d class matter as it was before, to 1 cent for 2 ounces.

Cannon addressed the House in further explanation of the bill.

Garfield gave the history of the legislation of last session which it is now proposed to repeal. It had originated in the Postoffice Department in the shape of a letter to the chairman of the postoffice committee suggesting that the rate of postage on merchandise be double. The sundry civil appropriation bill came from the Senate to the House at 2 o'clock on the morning of the last day of the session with over 300 amendments among which was an amendment supposed to be in pursuance of the Postmaster General's recommendation and in that idea it had been unanimously adopted by the committee on appropriations of which he was then chairman. No member of the committee understood that the language of the amendment included anything else than merchandise. After the bill had passed it was ascertained that the language of the amendment covered transient newspapers and in that all were surprised.

Randall—Why did the Postmaster General wait till the last hour of the session to put such a matter on the country when he had the entire session to come to a conclusion about it.

Garfield—I cannot answer for the Postmaster General's reasons.

Garfield then went on to argue against the propriety of carrying merchandise in the mails and said that if any one could show him any logical place to stop at in that business until a railroad car was loaded with goods and had its sides pasted with stamps he could do more than he (Garfield) could. The Postoffice Department in entering on the business of merchandise transportation was ultimately bound to absorb the entire freight transportation of the country.

Clarke—Is not merchandise carried in the mails of every other country.

Garfield—Perhaps. I am informed that the post office was established to transmit intelligence and anything else is a departure from the original idea.

Lawrence advocated the bill and said the legislation of the last session increasing the postage on third class matter was ... at the instance of the express companies and was a great detriment to the public interests. He favored the bill because the postoffice reached every village and the express companies did not and if the people of these remote places were cut off from the privilege of receiving packages ... [illegible]

Randall also supported the bill and expressed gratification that those who had any connection with the legislation last year now sought to repeal it. ... Even the Postmaster General ... suggested the repeal ... [illegible]

The bill then passed without division.

The House then went into committee of the whole, Hoskins in the chair on the military academy appropriation bill which appropriates ... Hale of Maine ... the committee on appropriations (Randall) that in the economical care with which he proposed to run the ... The committee on appropriations of the last House, under the chairmanship of his friend from Ohio (Garfield) had been all over that ground and had last session reduced the ordinary expenses of government by an amount of over ... which had been a great work. The gentleman from Pennsylvania might continue this work but he could not originate it. He gave figures to show that the reduction for the last two years amounted to over ... and he remarked that the committee on appropriations of last Congress ... of its work and particularly of holding ... only what had been appropriated. He did not wish it to be assumed that no check had been thrown over wasteful expenditures until the Democratic party had been placed at the head of affairs. He warned his friend from Pennsylvania, Randall, not to waste his time and efforts on fields which already have been cropped. There was still ground which was worth going over and he wanted to ... over that ground. He wanted him Randall to bear in mind the French proverb that man who goes for a plucked cherry comes back empty handed.

Passing on to the discussion of the bill under consideration he strenuously opposed any reduction in the pay of professors or cadets and said he would strike no blow directly or indirectly at that great military school which had furnished some of the greatest commanders of the present day. The people had not been complaining of the salaries of West Point professors or cadets. What they had been complaining of was of railroad subsidies and the like. They were demanding that 'rings' and frauds should be broken up that the Indian ring if it had any existence should be broken up and that the whisky ring should be broken up. Congress could not legislate too closely on the subjects. It could not sustain and uphold the administration too strongly in its efforts to break up those rings. Congress might also curtail extravagance in public buildings those enormous structures which were perhaps not needed, or at any rate not needed to-day. On these subjects both sides of the House could join hands and retrench and save money, but, in the matters of salaries fixed by government he asked if anybody believed that the people were complaining that their public servants were being paid too much.

Hamilton of New Jersey a member of the committee on appropriations having charge of the bill replied to the strictures of Hale and asserted that the figures and facts showed there was large room for retrenchment. The estimates sent in for the military academy amounted to $417,000 but the committee on appropriations had cut them down to $243,641 and the committee believed that the reduction could be made without impairing the utility of the institution to any extent. He asserted that the present compensation of the superintendent of the academy was better than any government official, except the President receiving as he did in one way or other—by direct pay by percentage for longevity, allowance by quarters, rations and one thing or another—about $7000 a year. He referred to the salaries of other officials and said the salaries could be reduced as proposed and still leave an elegant compensation. This bill he said proposed that army officers stationed at West Point should have the same pay and allowance as ... [illegible] ... against the bill were not well founded and reminded the House that the road to economy was now open and it was in the discretion of the House to say how far it should be pursued.

Hurlburt opposed the economic features of the bill, and suggested that at the time when his (Hamilton's) brother was a West Point cadet receiving $... month members of Congress only received $8 per day and it might be economic for him (Hamilton) to revert to the ... the surplus pay which he now received. In his judgment this bill struck directly, wilfully and ignorantly—all three of them at once—at the very being of a great national institution whose record was clear to every man in the House. Every gentleman from the South had attested the advantages of the great training and high teaching of that institution in Lee and Longstreet and Stonewall Jackson. The question directly was whether the academy should be maintained on that liberal footing which its importance demanded and which the dignity of the nation required. He ventured to say that the members of the committee on appropriations did not know how many clerks there were in the institution to be provided for. They had undertaken to strike with an awkward left handed cowardly blow at men whom the nation had sent there to be educated not for their own benefit but for that of the nation. He warned the gentlemen of that committee that there was no institution of this country which they had better be more careful in ... with than West Point Military Academy. There had been a time when it might have been popular to interfere with it but that time was past.

Hurlburt criticised the attempt of the committee on appropriations to ... West Point professors of their longevity allowance. If he understood the chief principle of civil service reform it was that a man, having once acquired a position and filled it honorably, was entitled to remain there undisturbed and unharassed and to have his rank or pay increased according to the time of his service. That was the principle which had prevailed in the army as regards officers. One of the West Point professors had been there 47 years—the professor of mathematics—a man admitted on all hands to be the very highest scientific authority, and to have the most singular facility for communicating knowledge. That gentleman by his long continuance in the service and by his diligence in well doing was entitled to the $4500 a year which the committee on appropriations now proposed to cut down. That committee which had the whole interests of the United States committed to their charge could not possibly be expected to know ... all the things it acted upon. He (Hurlburt) looked upon the law fixing the pay and emoluments of army officers as among the contracts of the nation. When a man was induced to leave the active service in the army in which he was sure of promotion and to settle down for life in the greater but more quiet task of educating youth the nation had pledged its faith to him and it was bad faith, unsound economy and unsound policy to attempt to violate that contract. He was glad that the proposition to do so came from where it had come. God forbid that any man who had borne arms on either side should disgrace himself by upsetting the calculations of a lifetime and disturbing the honorable dream which these gentlemen had a right to indulge in relying on the promise of the Government. He spoke of this thing now because coming events cast their shadows before. This ill considered ignorant attack on West Point was but the skirmish line of the main movement to be directed against that great institution of which West Point was the nursery, and of which the nation was proud. The people did not want to see the honor of the national school for soldiers and the dignity of its professors struck at as they were in this bill.

Without action on the bill the House adjourned.

The Direct Cable.

The Times in its financial article says the following letter makes a statement of an extraordinary kind with regard to the frequent ruptures of the Direct Cable Company's wire. It is hardly possible to believe that malicious conduct of the kind here ... could be adopted for any but sinister motives. For the sake of all concerned it is to be hoped that the fullest investigation may be made. And it is equally certain that the ruptured cable was in each case sound and perfect up to the very moment when communication ceased and that the ruptured ends which have been brought home prove beyond all doubt that the rupture was by violent means in a depth exceeding that of dragging anchors under ordinary circumstances.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON CITY

Washington, Jan 10 1876.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Of the general proceedings in Congress the telegraph furnishes you a daily report, which leaves little to be desired by way of addition or explanation. These letters, therefore may be more properly devoted to occasional topics which the telegraphic reports are not so likely to touch upon. At this time I desire to present some considerations upon the question of additional railroads to the Pacific.

It is hardly probable that the Southern Pacific railroad scheme embodied in what is known as Tom Scott's bill will pass this session. President making is the main thing thought of. Members of Congress hesitate to commit themselves to a measure or a policy which might be used with effect against them or their party in certain sections of the Union in the next elections. Therefore many are shy of this proposition now, who undoubtedly would favor it another time, and it is a common belief here that though the bill may fail this session, it will surely pass next, when the Presidential election is out of the way. At the opening of the present session there was an emphatic vote in the House against the policy of further subsidies. But this is looked upon as merely a piece of buncombe. Such action has not been unusual heretofore, and invariably thereafter the usual batch of subsidy bills has been brought forward, and members who were on the record against subsidies in a general way, have voted for them.

No one questions that there ought to be more roads across the continent. The greatest and most extortionate monopolies in America are the Union Pacific and Central Pacific roads. They were built by the Government and given to the men who control them. The roads never cost the present managers a dollar. The United States donated the bonds that built the roads and pays interest in full on the bonds, and all the companies have to do is to operate the roads, charge what they like and pocket the proceeds. It is not wonderful that under this state of things the managers of the roads have all become immensely wealthy already. The prices charged are enormous. Fare from San Francisco to Omaha is one hundred dollars; distance, nineteen hundred miles. The rate is a little more than five and a quarter cents per mile. Now, take the roads from Council Bluffs to Chicago, built with private capital, or at most getting only a land grant. The distance traversed by these roads is five hundred miles. Fare is fifteen dollars or three cents a mile. At the same rate tickets from San Francisco to Omaha should cost but fifty seven dollars. East of Chicago the roads charge less than three cents a mile for through fares; and yet these roads were built altogether by private capital. You can travel from Omaha to New York for $57 50. If those roads charged the same rates as the Union and Central Pacific the cost would be $77 50, or more than double what it is now.

This simple statement shows at a glance the extortions of the Pacific railroads. It would be possible to tolerate them, had the roads been built by private capital as other roads are, for the nature of the country is such that the local business is not great. The through business, however, is immense. But when it is remembered that these roads didn't cost their proprietors a dollar, and that the Government pays their interest and even pays for its own transportation over them the situation becomes really exasperating. A matter of such moment is one of national importance. The considerations presented constitute an unanswerable argument for another road across the continent to check and control such inordinate rapacity.

Now the question is seriously asked why shouldn't the Government subsidize two more roads, under proper restrictions, to the Pacific coast? Both the Northern and Southern are wanted. The addition to the public debt would really be but a bagatelle. It would not add perceptibly to the burdens of the country for whether we carry one hundred millions more or less additional debt is a small matter, provided the debt is incurred for the benefit of the country and the money honestly employed for the purposes designated. Besides, the development of new portions of the country resulting directly from the construction of the roads, would increase the general wealth by an amount immensely greater than the subsidy asked from the Government and furthermore the aid required for the roads can be furnished under such restrictions and conditions as will not ultimately cost the Government anything. There is no need to build the roads out of Government bounty and give them to favored parties, as was done in the case of the present Pacific railroads. After they are once fairly in operation they can pay their own way and need be no charge to the Government. The present roads could do this easily if they would and have a large surplus left. But they have too good a thing and since they are fortified by a recent decision of the Supreme Court they are wholly masters of the situation and no power can bring them to terms.

In consequence of this state of facts the movement for a new road has received a powerful impetus. Of course the existing roads having an exclusive monopoly and now wanting "only to be let alone" will oppose with all their might any proposition to aid other roads. They will use the great power that has been given them by the country to circumvent all attempts to curb that power. But it is only a question of time. There must be and will be one or more additional roads to the Pacific. It is not a local interest. Competition in transportation across the continent is urgently demanded. It is swelling to the proportion of a question of national magnitude. As such it must sooner or later receive favorable action from Congress.

There now seems to be no doubt that the little steamer Cordelia which left Empire City for the Coquille December 24th is lost with all on board. The Coos Bay Record says: "The following are the names of her crew: George Lemming, master; Frank French, mate; James Cushman engineer. There were also on board two seamen and the cook their names to us unknown. We have just heard that a vessel supposed to be the Cordelia was found wrecked about 10 miles south of Tatoosh lighthouse at the southern entrance of the Straits of Fuca. No further particulars."

In the U. S. circuit court, yesterday, the case of the Government against the Central Pacific Railroad Company to recover five per cent of the net earnings of the corporation, was continued until to-day.

Child Found.

San Francisco, Jan. 25.—Police officer White this morning found a living male infant, five or six days old abandoned, in a vacant lot on Hayes street, near Octavia, and took it to his house, pending steps for the discovery of the parents.

Suicide.

Jno A. May shot himself this afternoon at No 719, Ellis street, inflicting a fatal wound the cause of despondency, arising from impaired health.

Resignation Accepted.

In the board of education the resignation of Richard Olt, the deputy clerk who brought charges against Superintendent Bolander, was accepted. The committee of investigation found that a number of teachers' certificates and diplomas had been irregularly issued by the State Board.

Row in Chinatown.

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—A disturbance occurred last night between some whites, who were "doing" Chinatown, and the members of the Chinese mission, who were celebrating the new year at the mission building, Sacramento street. The whites attempted to enter the building, but were ejected. Chinamen and whites assembled from all quarters, and a riot seemed imminent for a while, but was averted by some amicable arrangement.

Fire.

About 11 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the building, on Sansome, between Pine and California streets, occupied by Hopps & Sons as a paint shop, and a Chinese slipper manufactory in the basement. Owing to the inflammable nature of the stock, the building and contents were consumed. The total loss is estimated at about $15,000 dollars.

A Silly Suicide.

San Francisco Jan 26.—A young man named J. W. Warren who has been stopping at the Lick House for some time mysteriously disappeared Monday morning. He left a note addressed to A. W. Thompson Esq. a well known lawyer, who is the young man's uncle, in which Warren announced his intention to commit suicide as he had not the wherewith to pay his debts. He also stated his body would probably be found in the bay. He was last seen walking through Chinatown late Monday evening. He was a native of Boston belonging to an old and aristocratic family. He was about 25 years of age.

Avery's Obsequies.

San Francisco Jan 26. The preparations of the committee of the Art Association and the military for the obsequies of the late Benjamin P. Avery this afternoon are very much deranged through the inclemency of the weather. The funeral services commenced at the First Unitarian church at 2 o'clock this P. M. The casket containing the remains stood in the center of the space in front of the altar covered with bouquets, wreaths and crosses. The front of the altar was draped with the ... of sorrow which the Chinese government had presented to Mrs Avery in recognition of the high esteem in which the deceased was held by them. This memorial is a piece of blue satin 7 by 24 feet, the Chinese inscription it bears being in gold characters. Over the altar the American and Chinese flags were intertwined. A notable feature in the assemblage was a delegation representing eight Chinese business firms in this city all of whom were dressed in robes of ceremony. Rev. Horatio Stebbins, pastor of the First Unitarian Church officiated at the services held at the church, assisted by Rev. A. L. Stone pastor of the First Congregational Church. After the customary services Dr Stebbins delivered a eulogy on the deceased and Henry Edwards read a memorial poem written for the occasion by Daniel O'Connell. The exercises closing with prayer. At the close of the services the procession ... was formed to Lone Mountain cemetery. The procession was headed by an imposing military escort consisting of a detachment of the Regular Army and Navy and National Guards followed by the pall bearers, Major General ... Major General J. ... U. S. Collector of Customs ... Shannon, U. S. Naval Officer Edwin G. Waite, U. S. Circuit Judge Lorenzo Sawyer U. S. Circuit Judge Ogden Hoffman Ex Gov Fredk F. Low Ex Gov H. H. The hearse bearing the remains was followed by a detachment of United State troops as body bearers mourners and persons of the same rank as deceased. Maj Gen John M. Schofield, U. S. A., commanding military division of the Pacific and staff Rear Admiral John Rogers, U. S. N. commandant of the Navy yard at Mare Island and staff. Distinguished personages according to rank, the consular corps the judiciary, and city and county officers, including representatives from the board of supervisors and board of education; representatives of eight Chinese companies dressed in robes of ceremony, delegates from the chamber of commerce the Society of California Pioneers, members of the academy of sciences Art Association editorial fraternity Bohemian Club and a long line of citizens in carriages. The casket containing Mr. Avery's remains was temporarily interred in the vault of Milton S. Latham. On reaching the tomb prayer was said and a few simple ceremonies held, and the body was consigned to the vault. The rain, which had been falling heavily all day, ceased about the time the exercises at church closed, and on the march to the cemetery the sun shone brightly.

Storms and Interruption of Travel.

Los Angeles, Jan. 25.—The recent severe rain has caused the blockade of all stage and mail lines. The coast line stages are reported detained near Santa Barbara. The telegraph line of stages was cut off by the Santa Clara river and compelled to return to Andrew station. Above San Fernando on the San Fernando branch railroad, at Cotton branch and Anaheim branch inquiries are reported. The Santa Monica railroad is under water in places. The sun has shone to-day and the storm seems over for the present. San Francisco mails were sent by the steamer Ancon to-day.

Liabilities of Temple & Workman's Bank.

The official statement of the liabilities of the trustees of Temple & Workman's bank has not yet been made, but it is estimated at about $1,000,000. The property in the hands of the assignee is ample, at a low estimate, to pay the creditors in full, but the process will be a slow one and if forced, will result in disastrous sacrifices of real estate and injury to the interests of all.

Storm Ended.

San Diego Jan. 25.—The storm broke up last night and to-day has been very pleasant. The total rainfall of this storm is about two inches, for the season, six inches. In the interior the amount has been doubled while at Julian it amounts to over 15 inches. The ground has had a thorough soaking, and there is no doubt of a bountiful harvest and plenty of feed for all kinds of stock.

Snow at Yreka.

Yreka Jan 25.—Last Sunday about noon, snow commenced falling and lasted until midnight covering the ground with about eight inches of snow, which made good sleighing next day, the ground being frozen hard from the effects of the cold weather for the few days preceding. At Scott Mountain the snow was about six feet deep. A large force of men, horses and sleighs are hard at work trying to break the road through and keep communication open between Scott's and Trinity, in which effort the mail contractors between Yreka and Shasta, are sparing no exertions to accomplish. For several days before and since it snowed here there has been less snow south of us, on the Humbug mountains and Siskiyou. Where the snow usually falls heavily there has been no more than in town, and in the valleys out towards the old Modoc quarters, around the lava beds and battle field, the ground is barely covered, except on the high ridges. In Shasta valley the snow ranges from 12 to 18 inches deep, and in Strawberry valley from three to four feet. There have been great losses of sheep and cattle in this county from the effects of the continued storms this winter, and the cold weather of the past week or two, with the heavy snow storm of last Sunday morning will make the loss still greater.

Storm Ended—Fine Warm Rains.

San Luis Obispo, Jan. 25.—To-day the clouds have been breaking away and to all appearance the storm which began last Wednesday night, has ceased. Yesterday we had a succession of warm spring showers and the weather continuing very mild the farmers and all others seem happy with such glowing crop prospects. The amount of rain sown is greatly in excess of any previous year and if the season continues at all favorable the yield will be very large.

New Steamship Line Proposed.

Last night an important meeting was held at the Pico House called informally with the idea of the organization of a new steamship line, the vessels of which will ply exclusively between Santa Monica and San Francisco. We learn that $250,000 were pledged to the enterprise by persons whose subscriptions are as good as cash. Mr. E. J. Baldwin who was one of the parties present distinguished himself by his liberality in subscribing $75,000. Col R. S. Baker followed suit with $25,000. Altogether with outside subscriptions already secured the sum of $250,000 was ascertained to be on hand to start with.

Expectorant

Stubborn Coughs and Colds yield promptly to the healing and curative properties of Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. It loosens and promotes the expectoration of irritating matter,—mitigates much pain and distress, and checks inflammation.

Asthma, Bronchitis, and Throat Troubles are at once relieved by Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. It removes constriction of the Bronchial tubes, loosens phlegm, soothes and heals the mucous membrane, arrests any feverish tendency, and helps to forward a gradual cure.

Consumption, Pleurisy, and Lung Affections are generally controlled and ameliorated by Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. It saves the lungs from much irritation and distress, by relieving them of the irritating matters by which they are clogged; it also suppresses inflammation and gives the affected parts a chance to heal.

Whooping Cough, Croup and Hoarseness are efficaciously treated by Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. It removes difficulty of breathing and oppression in the throat or lungs, promotes the ejection of mucus and subdues the violence of these complaints at the outset. It is a Safe Family Curative, of long-established reputation, and where promptly administered, has enabled many to escape serious Lung Affections.

NEW YORK, Jan 26.—The affairs of Vice & Co., dry goods dealers, are being rapidly settled by the assignee. The liabilities will amount to over $1,[illegible].

Lynch Law in Charleston, West Virginia.

CINCINNATI, Jan 26.—The Gazette's Charleston (West Virginia) special says an altercation occurred between Thomas Hines and Wm Dooley regarding the latter's wife. To-night Hines went to Dooley's house, rapped on the door, and when Dooley appeared, stabbed him with a knife, severing the jugular vein, from which he died in about an hour after. The cases of Dawson and Estepp, charged with the murder of Lee, several days ago, was called up to-day at Charleston. The day was consumed by the prisoners' counsel in arguing for a change of venue, on the ground of the hostile feeling of the people against the prisoners. The Judge reserved his decision until to-morrow. The court room and is filled to-day with excited citizens mostly from the vicinity where the murder was committed.

Later.—About 200 men arrived at 1 P M and marched to the jail [illegible] and Estepp [illegible] took them off to the woods, where they will probably be found hanging to a tree in the morning. Dooley, who was killed by Hines early this evening, was a colored man, and after the killing he had carried off the Lee murderer the enraged citizens, to the number of 60, went to the jail and demanded Hines, who was delivered to them and they then followed the former crowd to the woods, with their prisoner who will probably share the same fate.

Wheeling, Jan 26.—A Chronicle Charleston special says the bodies of Dawson, Estepp and Hines, who were lynched last night, were taken down by the prosecuting attorney to-day and an inquest held. The verdict was that they came to their death by a mob whose names are unknown.

Revolution Broken Out in Mexico.

GALVESTON, Jan 26.—The News special from San Antonio, January 25th, says advices received at different points on the Rio Grande through couriers from Matamoras state that a revolution has been started in the northern and central portions of Mexico. On the Rio Grande General Herrera has declared for the movement and surprised the garrison at Parras. The revolutionists assaulted Monterey, which is defended by Madro, who is prepared to defend it until reinforcements can arrive. The majority of the people in the Northern districts are reported in favor of preparing for the movement. Gen Porfirio Diaz is at Laredo.

The Coal Mines.

NEW YORK, Jan 26.—The Coal Exchange has decided to work the mines from Feb. 5th till March 1st at the present rate of wages.

Saw Mill Burned.

NEW YORK, Jan 26.—Diaz & Poillon's saw and planing mill, Brooklyn was burned this morning. Loss $[illegible].

The Winslow Forgeries.

BOSTON, Jan 26.—It is positively stated that F D Winslow issued large quantities of fictitious stock of the Boston Post Company as collateral. A meeting of stock holders will be held on Friday to investigate. The paper will probably lose nothing, the sufferers being those who advanced money on it. Some of Winslow's operations are traced to L W Pond, of Worcester, and paper with the names of both on it has been brought to light. F Winslow's name is said to be on $150,000 worth of paper, and that of David Chamberlain on $60,000.

Writ of Attachment Served.

BOSTON, Jan 26.—At the instance of N G Green, one of the former proprietors of the Post a writ of attachment was served this morning on E F Waters, ostensibly owner of the Daily News. The writ is based on Winslow's transactions.

Effects of Winslow's Forgeries.

BOSTON, Jan 26.—The alleged over issue of the stock of the Boston Post Company has seriously complicated matters, and holders of it as collateral cannot tell whether their certificates are fraudulent or not. Winslow controlled the stock board to a great [illegible] will, and as he did not hesitate to forge the names of others [illegible] to notes, it is probable that he [illegible] certificates to suit his wants.

The McKee Trial.

ST. LOUIS, Jan 26.—Upon resumption of the trial of McKee to-day it was agreed between the court and the counsel for the Government and for the defense that neither Babcock nor the witnesses in his case summoned for his case should be required to present themselves next Monday, at which time the case is set on the docket. The McKee trial will last all this week and Mr. Vorhees said there was probability the trial of Maguire, ex-collector, would be as long as McKee's. Babcock follows McKee. The instructions of the court were that defendant and witnesses should simply be instructed to hold themselves in readiness to come, as soon as notified.

The Government then presented Conduce G. Megrue, who testified that in his conversation with Joyce at Leavenworth, during the operations of the Ring in 1871 and 1872, Leavenworth always told him he had paid the money to McKee. In his cross examination he said he found afterwards that Leavenworth had not always dealt fairly, but had sometimes reported collections on the crooked much less than they really were. He also said that until he was before to go before the grand jury last summer he never had any conversation with McKee upon any scheme to defraud the Government.

CHICAGO, Jan 26.—The Tribune's Washington special says reports have reached the treasury department from St. Louis that fears are entertained that at least one man has been smuggled into the jury box who cannot be depended on even if a strong case be made out. The statement does not cause much uneasiness at the department, since great confidence is still felt in the convincing character of the evidence collected for the prosecution. It is still uncertain when Babcock's trial will begin, but if will likely be reached for a fortnight. Ex Attorney General Williams, his counsel, is in this city working on the case, and expresses the greatest confidence in his ability to establish Babcock's innocence. The most intimate friends of Babcock do not lose their confidence, and await the trial with the greatest equanimity.

Hollis Hall Damaged by Fire.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—Hollis Hall, Harvard College was badly damaged by fire to-day.

Failures in Riga—Amount of Liabilities.

RIGA, Jan 26.—The liabilities of the two firms which failed yesterday are $1,520,000 and $1,[illegible], respectively. These failures have caused [illegible] of the local bank, with liabilities of [illegible] and assets estimated at $[illegible]. The suspensions of smaller firms are likely to [illegible], but no apprehension is felt for the stability of larger houses.

Bold Attempt to Rob a Bank.

NORTHAMPTON, Jan 26.—At Northampton last night, seven disguised men broke into the house of John Whittlesey, cashier of the Northampton National Bank, secured Mr. Whittlesey and family, obtained the keys of the Bank, and leaving one of their number as guard, the others proceeded to the Bank and attempted to break into the vault door and look were too strong. They left without accomplishing their purpose. Cashier Whittlesey was robbed of his gold watch and what money he had at home. There is no doubt that the gang had been planning the robbery for some time.

Revenue Defrauders Plead Guilty.

MILWAUKEE, Jan 26.—In the U. S. circuit court to-day the following persons plead guilty on indictments for conspiracy to defraud the revenue: E. P. Hills, D. H. Griffiths and H. A. Kerr, the distillers; Leopold Leith, Robert Kellwert, Chas. Henry Aaron Schoenfeld, Henry Schoenfeld and Wm Bergenthal, distillers, and Wm Hager, book keeper.

Two Men Killed by Nitro-glycerine Explosion.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Jan 26.—By an explosion of nitro-glycerine at Mowbry's factory two workmen were blown to pieces.

WASHINGTON CITY.

In Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan 26.—The Senate finance committee were mainly occupied with Sherman's bill relative to national bank receivers and bankruptcy proceedings, but its consideration was not concluded. The committee also had up Conkling's bill on the same general subject.

The Senate committee on appropriations heard Commissioners Dennison, Ketchum and Phelps on the subject of the payment of interest on the 3-65 District of Columbia bonds, the question being whether the United States should make an appropriation directly, or require the district authorities to pay the interest now and to look to the Federal government for an appropriation to make good any possible deficit in the District revenues hereafter. No action was taken.

The House committee on judiciary have agreed to report a bill allowing criminals in criminal cases to testify in their own behalf.

The Senate finance committee have agreed to recommend the confirmation of J. M. McGrew as auditor of the postoffice department.

Morton said his health was in such condition that he would not be able to continue his remarks to-day.

Bill to Reorganize the Judiciary.

Representative Knott, of Kentucky, reported from the committee on the judiciary a bill to reorganize the judiciary of the United States. The main features of the bill were as follows: The circuit court shall be held in each judicial district of the United States at the same time and place at which the district court shall or may be held, and such circuit court is established in every district where no such court now exists and shall belong to the circuit in the territorial limits of which it is embraced. The several circuit courts shall have and exercise no jurisdiction in cases of appeal or writs of error allowed taken or issued out after the 1st day of September 1876, but writs of error, appeals and reviews in bankruptcy cases may be had as heretofore provided there is established in each circuit a court of appeals with appelate jurisdiction of all cases arising in the several circuit and district courts. The justice of the supreme court assigned to the circuit, the circuit judge and the several district judges of the district composing the circuit shall be the judges of the court of appeals. No judge who has heard the cause in court below shall sit in the court of appeals upon the hearing of the same case, or be consulted or give any opinion to other judges in relation thereto. The court of appeals shall also be a court of record. The decision of the court of appeals upon questions of law shall in all cases except as provided be final and conclusive, but an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court. Appeals in chancery shall be allowed from the court of appeals to the Supreme Court in cases where the matter in controversy exceeds $10,000 in the manner now provided by law for directing appeals in like cases from the circuit court. The Chief Justice and the other justices of the Supreme Court may attend any term of the circuit or district court within his circuit and when so attending shall sit in and preside over the court.

Important Land Cases.

WASHINGTON, Jan 26.—In the case of Rancho Vallecitos de San Marcos, California, for which application has been made for a patent by Lorenzo Soto, the title was confirmed. The general land office has instructed the surveyor general to notify the parties interested that they will be allowed 60 days from date of notice to produce evidence tending to show the location of calls of grants on the earth's surface, and at the end of that time if no sufficient proof of such location be filed he shall cause an examination to be made in the field and furnish the land office with an exhibit thereof for the settlement of the case.

The general land office sent to the surveyor general at San Francisco to-day the patent dated Jan 21, 1876, in favor of Henry D. McCobb for a California private land claim—Carrol de Hierra—containing 413,177 acres.

Naval Investigations.

CHICAGO, Jan 26.—The Times' Washington special says Congressman Goode was before the committee on naval affairs yesterday and told what he knew about Robeson's rascalities in his district, and the committee felt convinced that his charges were authentic. He resides in Norfolk district, where the alleged frauds were practiced, and brings testimony to substantiate all the charges. A committee of three members was appointed to go to Norfolk and investigate Mr. Goode, among other things, informed the committee that the Republican party at Norfolk had manipulated matters at the navy yard so as to make their subservient party purposes. On election days they would collect a large number of men at the yard and tell them if they voted the Republican ticket they could have employment. The appointment of men at the navy yard, he says, came from the Republican executive committee and not from the commandant at the yard. For some time before and on election days as many as 1,500 men have been given employment at the yard with no any occasion for their services but simply to obtain their votes. After the elections are over and the votes of the employes are not wanted, the are largely discharged and the number is reduced almost one half. In addition to this the employes at the navy yard are required to submit to a pecuniary assessment for the benefit of the Republican party and if they do not they must forfeit their places in the yard.

Reciprocity Treaties.

Four commercial treaties are talked of in Congress and two are now under consideration. They are with Canada, the Hawaiian Islands, Cuba and Mexico. Three commissioners are here pressing the Canada treaty and they have a very earnest advocate in Ward, of New York, of the House committee. The committee has given the subject consideration enough to direct a sub-committee to prepare a report. The ways and means committee commenced anew the consideration of the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty. The greatest objections to the treaty are the sugar interests. The contest is between San Francisco and New Orleans sugar markets. The proposed treaties with Cuba and Mexico are the subject only of speculative discussion.

Tenure of the Presidential Office.

WASHINGTON, Jan 26.—Several days ago the House committee on judiciary reported the proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States as follows: No person who has held or may hereafter hold, the office of President shall ever again be eligible to the same office. To-day Mr Frye in behalf of the minority of the committee, proposed a substitute for the majority report as follows: From and after March 4, 1885, the term of office of the President and Vice President of the United States shall be six years and any person having been elected to hold the office of President, or who for two years has held the office, shall be ineligible to re-election.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan 26.—The chair laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury in response to the resolution of the 20th inst. furnishing a report of the action taken by him in regard to the collection of money due the United States by the Pacific railroad companies; ordered to be printed and lie on the table.

West presented a memorial signed by several members of the State senate of Louisiana in reference to the credentials of Eustis claiming a seat as U. S. Senator from that State. West said he presented the memorial on behalf of Eustis and asked that it be referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

Allison called up the House bill transferring the custody of certain Indian trust funds from the Secretary of the Interior to the Treasury of the United States; passed.

Howe, from the judiciary committee reported favorably on the House bill to amend the revised statutes of the United States relating to naturalization; passed.

Morrill, from the committee on appropriations, reported with an amendment the House joint resolution directing the commissioners of the District of Columbia to pay the interest on the 3-65 bonds under the act of June 20, 1874; placed on the calendar.

Morrill gave notice he would call up the joint resolution to-morrow for action, as it was necessary the appropriations should be made before the end of this month in order to meet the obligations of the Government falling due on the 1st of February.

West submitted a resolution requesting the Secretary of the treasury to submit to the Senate copies of any proposition made by the Pacific Railroad companies for the creation of a sinking fund for the redemption of the Government mortgages, together with a statement of the action of the Government thereon and of the reason therefor.

The morning hour having expired, the chair laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being the bill to confirm pre-emption and homestead entries of public lands within the limits of railroad grants in cases where the entries had been made under the regulations of the land department.

Christiancy moved that the bill be referred to the judiciary committee.

Bogy said Congress might pass this bill to enable these settlers to get their lands, but the railroad companies would contest the right, and would be successful in ousting them. He believed a law could be framed to avoid all this, and he hoped it would be referred to the judiciary committee to be perfected.

Sherman said this was really a conflict between railroad grants and grants made to pre-emption and homestead settlers. It affected millions of people in the Western States. He had heard of complaints growing out of doubts as to the rights of settlers. The most marked case he knew of was one which occurred in Iowa, where great numbers of settlers were deprived of their homes without any shadow of justice. He was in favor of giving to the settlers a patent of the United States, when their claims were in pursuance of the pre-emption and homestead law. Congress never intended that the railroad companies should have title to any land rightfully held by settlers. He thought this bill was an assertion of the power of Congress and Congress had the power to protect the rights of those claimants who acquired their claims under the authority of law. It would be delaying a simple act of justice to refer the bill to the judiciary committee.

Morrill, of Vermont, said in one instance Congress had been compelled to pass a law giving pre-emptors twice the amount of land formerly held by them where they had been ousted by the railroad companies. He referred to decisions of the land office and the Interior Department, and said he would like to know what the Commissioner of the General Land Office had to say of his decisions which involved Congress in this wild difficulty. There must have been gross neglect of duty on the part of the Commissioner of Public Lands to cause this difficulty. H. (Morrill) desired to have the bill so perfected that no claim should come to Congress from railroads to make good claims made by them for lands given to settlers.

Frelinghuysen said this brought before Congress all the grants made by the United States. All his prejudices were favorable to settlers, but he did not think this bill perfect. He hoped it would be made the special order for some day next week, so that Senators might have an opportunity to look into this bill. It might have an effect upon a very important suit now pending, and he certainly Congress did not want to interfere with questions now pending before the courts.

Boutwell spoke in favor of referring the bill to the judiciary committee, and believed the committee could report a bill by which the Attorney General could be authorized to proceed against the railroad companies and have declared all patents invalid issued to them without authority of law.

After further discussion by Harvey, Sargent, McMillan, Ingalls, Morton, Wright, Bogy and Hitchcock the motion of Christiancy to refer the bill to the judiciary committee was rejected.

Howe moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The House bill relating to the centennial celebration of American Independence was referred to the committee on appropriations.

The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

House.

Clark, from the committee on postoffices and post roads, called up the bill regulating postage on 3d class mail matter. It provides that all mailable matter of the 3d class referred to in sections 3,878 and 1911 of the revised statutes may weigh not exceeding four pounds for each package and that the postage thereon shall be one cent for every two ounces or fraction thereof. Clark explained the this bill proposed to repeal the law passed in the last hours of the last session in form of an amendment inserted in the sundry civil appropriations bill with evident intention of misleading the House; that law increased the postage on 3d class mail matter from 1 cent per 2 ounces to 1 cent per ounce, or from 8 cents to 16 cents per pound. This bill proposed to reinstate the postage on 3d class matter as it was before to 1 cent for 2 ounces.

Cannon addressed the House in further explanation and advocacy of the bill.

Garfield gave the history of the legislation of last session which it is now proposed to repeal. It had originated in the Postoffice Department in the shape of a letter to the chairman of the postoffice committee suggesting that the rate of postage on merchandise be doubled. The sundry civil appropriation bill came from the Senate to the House at 2 o'clock on the morning of the last day of the session with over 100 amendments, among which was an amendment supposed to be in pursuance of the Postmaster General's recommendation, and to that the it had been unanimously adopted by the committee on appropriations, of which he was then chairman. No member of the committee understood that the language of the amendment included anything else than merchandise. After the bill had passed it was ascertained that the language of the amendment covered transient newspapers, and to that all were surprised.

Randall—Why did the Postmaster General wait till the last hour of the session to put such a matter on the country when he had the entire session to come to a conclusion about it?

Garfield—I cannot answer for the Postmaster General's reasons.

Garfield then went on to argue against the propriety of carrying merchandise in the mails, and said that if any one could show him any logical place to stop at in that business until a railroad car was loaded with goods and had its sides packed with stamps he could do more than he (Garfield) could. The Postoffice Department in entering on the business of merchandise transportation was ultimately bound to absorb the entire freight transportation of the country.

Clarke—Is not merchandise carried in the mails of every other country?

Garfield—Perhaps. I am informed that the post office was established to transmit intelligence, and anything else is an departure from the original plan.

Lawrence advocated the bill and said the legislation of the last session increasing the postage on third class matter was undoubtedly at the instance of the express companies and was a great detriment to the public interests. He favored the bill because the postoffice reached every village and the express companies did not, and if the people of those remote places were cut off from the privilege of receiving packages of seeds, books and merchandise by mail they could not receive them at all. He also favored it because these merchandise packages could be carried without loss to the postoffice department. Merchandise could be carried all round the globe at eight cents a pound or less. No merchant in New York would send hundred pound packages through the mails and pay eight cents a pound for them because the express companies would carry them cheaper. That was an answer to his colleague's (Garfield's) argument.

Randall also supported the bill and expressed gratification that those who had any connection with the legislation last year now wish to repeal, disavowed it. Even the Postmaster General had suggested the repeal of the law which he had been found guilty of smuggling. It was remarked that all the charters [illegible] committed in the house [illegible] the express [illegible] [illegible]. The result of the [illegible] session had been the [illegible] of the people and to augment the receipts of express companies at the [illegible].

Garfield asked Randall whether he held the committee on appropriations of the last Congress responsible for anything guilty or [illegible] thing in regard to this legislation.

Randall replied he [illegible] [illegible] and he did [illegible] [illegible] the committee on appropriations of the last House guilty of [illegible], and he promised that the committee on appropriations in the present House would not be guilty of anything of the kind.

[illegible] [illegible] Randall's [illegible] on the [illegible] natural [illegible] for a firm who patched on his harness boasts he [illegible].

Randall replied that [illegible] [illegible] but had simply called attention when [illegible] situation was called for. He did not propose [illegible] in the interest of express companies or in any interests except those of the people.

The bill then passed without division.

The House then went into committee of the whole, Hoskins in the chair, on the military academy appropriation bill which appropriates $321,211 and was addressed by Hale, of Maine. He reminded the Chairman of the committee on appropriations (Randall) that in the economical care with which he proposed to run the was not broad enough ground. The committee on appropriations of the last House, under the chairmanship of his friend from Ohio (Garfield) had been all over that ground, and had, last session reduced the ordinary expenses of government by an amount of over $24,000,000. That had been a great work. The gentleman from Pennsylvania might continue this work but could not originate it. He gave figures to show that the reduction for the last two years amounted to over $34,000,000, and he remarked that the committee on appropriations of last Congress ought be well proud of its work and partly early of holding the government rigidly to spending only what had been appropriated. He did not wish it to be assumed that no check had been thrown over wasteful expenditures until the Democratic party had been placed at the head of affairs. He warned his friend from Pennsylvania (Randall) not to waste his time and efforts on fields which already have been cropped. There was still ground which was worth going over and he wanted to help him in going over that ground. But wanted him (Randall) to bear in mind the French proverb that man who goes for a plucked cherry, comes back empty handed.

Passing on to the discussion of the bill under consideration, he strenuously opposed any reduction in the pay of professors or cadets, and said he would strike no blow directly or indirectly at that great military school, which had furnished some of the greatest commanders of the present day. The people had not been complaining of the salaries of West Point professors or cadets. What they had been complaining of was of railroad subsidies and the like. They were demanding that "rings" and frauds should be broken up; that the Indian ring, if it had any existence, should be broken up, and that the whisky ring should be broken up. Congress could not legislate too closely on the subjects. It could not sustain and uphold the administration too strongly in its efforts to break up those rings. Congress might also curtail extravagance in public buildings, those enormous structures which were perhaps not needed, or, at any rate, not needed to-day. On these subjects, both sides of the House could join hands and retrench and save money, but, in matters of salaries fixed by government he asked if anybody believed that the people were complaining that their public servants were being paid too much.

Hamilton, of New Jersey, a member of the committee on appropriations having charge of the bill, replied to the strictures of Hale and asserted that the figures and facts showed there was large room for retrenchment. The estimates sent in for the military academy amounted to $417,000, but the committee on appropriations had cut them down to $24[3],611, and the committee believed that the reduction could be made without impairing the utility of the institution to any extent. He asserted that the present compensation of the superintendent of the academy was better than any government official, except the President, receiving, as he did in one way or other—by direct pay, by percentage for longevity, allowance by forage, allowance by quarters, rations and one thing or another—about $7,000 a year. He referred to the salaries of other officials and said the salaries could be reduced as proposed and still have an adequate compensation. This bill he still proposed that army officers stationed at West Point should have the same pay and allowance as they had in the [illegible]. He [illegible] that the [illegible] charged against the bill were not well founded and [illegible] the House that the road to retrenchment [illegible] was now open and it was in the discretion of the House to say how far it should be pursued.

Hurlburt opposed the economic features of the bill, and suggested that at the time when bill (Hamilton's) brother was a West Point cadet receiving $[illegible] a month members of Congress only received $8 per day and it might be economic for him (Hamilton) to limit to the treasury the surplus pay which he now received. In his judgment this bill struck deliberately, willfully, and ignorantly—all three of them at once—at the very being of a great national institution whose record was clear to every man in the House. Even gentlemen from the South had visited the advantages of the great training and high teaching of that institution in Lee and Longstreet and Stonewall Jackson. The question directly was whether the academy should be maintained on that liberal, benign footing which its importance demanded and which the dignity of the nation required. He ventured to say that the members of the committee on appropriations did not know how many clerks there were in the institution to be provided for. They had undertaken to strike with an awkward left handed cowardly blow at men whom the nation had sent there to be educated not for their own benefit, but for that of the nation. He warned the gentleman of that committee that there was no institution of this country which they had better be more careful in interfering with than West Point Military Academy. There had been a time when it might have been popular to interfere with it, but that time was past.

Hurlburt criticised the attempt of the committee on appropriations to dock West Point professors of their longevity allowance. If he understood the chief principle of civil service reform it was that a man having once acquired a position and filled it honorably was entitled to remain there undisturbed and unharrassed and to have his rank or pay increased according to the time of his service. That was the principle which had prevailed in the army as regards officers. One of the West Point professors had been there 47 years—the professor of mathematics—a man admitted on all hands to be the very highest scientific authority, and to have the most singular faculty for communicating knowledge. That gentleman, by his long continuance in the service and by his diligence in well doing was entitled to the $1,500 a year which the committee on appropriations now proposed to cut down. That committee which had the whole interests of the United States committed to its charge could not possibly be expected to know directly all the things it acted upon. He (Hurlburt) looked upon the bill fixing the pay and emoluments of army officers as among the contracts of the nation. When a man was induced to leave the active service in the army in which he was sure of promotion and to settle down for life in the greater but more quiet task of educating youth the nation had pledged its faith to him and it was bad faith, misplaced economy and unsound policy to attempt to violate that contract. He was glad that the proposition had come from where it had come. God forbid that any man who had borne arms on either side should disgrace himself by upsetting the calculations of a lifetime and disturbing the honorable dream which these gentlemen had a right to indulge in relying on the promise of the Government. He spoke of this thing now, because coming events cast their shadows before. This ill considered ignorant attack on West Point was but the skirmisher of the main movement to be directed against that great institution of which West Point was the nursery, and of which the nation was proud. The people did not want to see the honor of the national school for soldiers and the dignity of its professors shrink as they were in this bill.

Without action on the bill the House adjourned.

The Direct Cable.

The Times in its financial article says the following letter makes a statement of an extraordinary kind with regard to the frequent ruptures of the Direct Cable Company's wire. It is hardly possible to believe that malicious conduct of the kind here implied could be adopted for any but sinister motives. For the sake of all concerned it is to be hoped that the fullest investigation may be made. As to the delay which occurred in making the successive breakages known we are informed that on the last occasion the company sent word to the stock exchange before 11 o'clock in the morning so that the responsibility of keeping back the announcement loses must rest with the Direct U. S. Cable Co.

LONDON, Jan 25, 1876.

Sir: In your article to-day you say respecting the direct U. S. cable, it would appear that the news of the interruption was not known in the market to certain operators at least 5 minutes before it was posted in the stock exchange, and during that short period Anglo American stock jumped up nearly two per cent. While fully appreciating your laudable endeavor to stop an infamous system of gambling which cannot be too strongly condemned, I beg leave to assure you that the evil lies much deeper than appears at first sight and that you may do a great public service in supporting the directors of the Direct U. S. Cable Co. in obtaining a public inquiry into the nefarious proceedings for bringing the perpetrators to justice. It is an undoubted fact that the ruptures of the direct U. S. cable which have occurred in regular succession since the line opened have been known to certain operators on the stock exchange, not hours but some days before they happened. And it is equally certain that the ruptured cable was in each case sound and perfect up to the very moment when communication ceased and that the ruptured ends, which have been brought home, prove beyond all doubt that the rupture was by violent means, in a depth exceeding that of dragging anchors under ordinary circumstances.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON CITY

WASHINGTON, Jan 10, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN.

Of the general proceedings in Congress the telegraph furnishes you a daily report which leaves little to be desired by way of addition or explanation. These letters, therefore, may be more properly devoted to occasional topics which the telegraphic reports are not so likely to touch upon. At this time I desire to present some considerations upon the question of additional railroads to the Pacific.

It is hardly probable that the Southern Pacific railroad scheme embodied in what is known as "Tom Scott's bill," will pass this session. President making is the main thing thought of. Members of Congress hesitate to commit themselves to a measure or a policy which might be used with effect against them or their party, in certain sections of the Union, in the next elections. Therefore many are shy of this proposition now, who undoubtedly would favor it another time, and it is a common belief here that though the bill may fail this session, it will surely pass next, when the Presidential election is out of the way. At the opening of the present session there was an emphatic vote in the House against the policy of further subsidies. But this is looked upon as merely a piece of buncombe. Such action has not been unusual heretofore, and invariably thereafter the usual batch of subsidy bills has been brought forward, and members, who were on the record against subsidies in a general way, have voted for them.

No one questions that there ought to be more roads across the continent. The greatest and most extortionate monopolies in America are the Union Pacific and Central Pacific roads. They were built by the Government and given to the men who control them. The roads never cost the present managers a dollar. The United States donated the bonds that built the roads and pays interest in full on the bonds and all the companies have to do is to operate the roads, charge what they like and pocket the proceeds. It is not wonderful that under this state of things the managers of the roads have all become immensely wealthy already. The prices charged are enormous. Fare from San Francisco to Omaha is one hundred dollars; distance, nineteen hundred miles. The rate is a little more than five and a quarter cents per mile. Now, take the roads from Council Bluffs to Chicago, built with private capital, or at most getting only a land grant. The distance traversed by these roads is five hundred miles. Fare is fifteen dollars, or three cents a mile. At the same rate tickets from San Francisco to Omaha should cost but fifty seven dollars. East of Chicago the roads charge less than three cents a mile for through fares, and yet these roads were built altogether by private capital. You can travel from Omaha to New York for $37 50. If those roads charged the same rate as the Union and Central Pacific, the cost would be $77 50, or more than double what it is now.

This simple statement shows at a glance the extortions of the Pacific railroads. It would be possible to tolerate them had the roads been built by private capital as other roads are, for the nature of the country is such that the local business is not great. The through business, however, is immense. But when it is remembered that these roads didn't cost their proprietors a dollar and that the Government pays their interest, and even pays for its own transportation over them, the situation becomes really exasperating. A matter of such moment is one of national importance. The considerations presented constitute an unanswerable argument for another road across the continent to check and control such inordinate rapacity.

Now the question is seriously asked, why shouldn't the Government subsidize two more roads, under proper restrictions, to the Pacific coast? Both the Northern and Southern are wanted. The addition to the public debt would really be but a bagatelle. It would not add perceptibly to the burdens of the country, for whether we carry one hundred millions more or less additional debt is a small matter, provided the debt is incurred for the benefit of the country and the money honestly employed for the purposes designated. Besides, the development of new portions of the country resulting directly from the construction of the roads would increase the general wealth by an amount immensely greater than the subsidy asked from the Government, and furthermore, the aid required for the roads can be furnished under such restrictions and conditions as will not ultimately cost the Government anything. There is no need to build the roads out of Government bounty and give them to favored parties, as was done in the case of the present Pacific railroads. After they are once fairly in operation they can pay their own way and need be no charge to the Government. The present roads could do this easily if they would and have a large surplus left. But they have too good a thing, and since they are fortified by a recent decision of the Supreme Court they are wholly masters of the situation and no power can bring them to terms.

In consequence of this state of facts the movement for a new road has received a powerful impetus. Of course the existing roads, having an exclusive monopoly and now wanting "only to be let alone," will oppose with all their might any proposition to aid other roads. They will use the great power that has been given them by the country to circumvent all attempts to curb that power. But it is only a question of time. There must be and will be one or more additional roads to the Pacific. It is not a local interest. Competition in transportation across the continent is urgently demanded. It is swelling to the proportions of a question of national magnitude. As such it must sooner or later receive favorable action from Congress.

There now seems to be no doubt that the little steamer Cordelia, which left Empire City for the Coquille December 24th, is lost with all on board. The Coos Bay Record says: The following are the names of her crew: George Flemming, master; Frank French, mate; James Cashman, engineer. There were also on board two seamen and the cook, their names being unknown. We have just heard that a vessel supposed to be the Cordelia was found wrecked about 40 miles south of Tatoosh lighthouse, at the southern entrance of the Straits of Fuca. No further particulars.

A. Pierce, Esq., of Albany, has pears which weigh two and a half pounds each that he proposes to send to the Centennial.

Snow Blockade Raised.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 26.—Three overland passenger trains are expected to arrive at Oakland to-day, the snow blockade having been raised and regular communication re-established.

Burr Held to Bail for Taking a Bribe.

Ex Assistant Internal Revenue Collector Burr, accused of having received a bribe from a Chinaman in Kern county, was brought before Commissioner O'Brien yesterday. He waived an examination and was held to answer before the grand jury in $5,000 bail.

In the U. S. circuit court, yesterday, the case of the Government against the Central Pacific Railroad Company to recover five per cent of the net earnings of the corporation, was continued until to-day.

Child Found.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 25.—Police officer White this morning found a living male infant, five or six days old, abandoned, in a vacant lot on Hayes street, near Octavia, and took it to his house, pending steps for the discovery of the parents.

Suicide.

Jno A. May shot himself this afternoon at No. 719, Ellis street, inflicting a fatal wound; the cause of despondency, arising from impaired health.

Resignation Accepted.

In the board of education the resignation of Richard Ott, the deputy clerk who brought charges against Superintendent Bolander, was accepted. The committee of investigation found that a number of teachers' certificates and diplomas had been irregularly issued by the State Board.

Row in Chinatown.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 26.—A disturbance occurred last night between some whites, who were "doing" Chinatown, and the members of the Chinese mission, who were celebrating the new year at the mission building, Sacramento street. The whites attempted to enter the building, but were ejected. Chinamen and whites assembled from all quarters, and a riot seemed imminent for a while, but was averted by some amicable arrangement.

Fire.

About 11 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the building, on Sansome, between Pine and California streets, occupied by Hopps & Sons as a paint shop, and a Chinese slipper manufactory in the basement. Owing to the inflammable nature of the stock, the building and contents were consumed. The total loss is estimated at about $15,000 dollars.

Suicide Dead.

John A. May, who shot himself yesterday, died this morning.

Delinquent California Bank Stock Sold.

Newhall & Co sold, to-day, at auction, 480 shares of the stock of the Bank of California, delinquent on assessment. The stock brought $15 to $16, assessment paid.

Antioch Case About to Close.

The Antioch distillery case is at last drawing towards a close. The counsel are making their arguments to-day.

The Weather.

It has been raining hard nearly all the forenoon, but now—2 P. M.—it has cleared up temporarily.

A Silly Suicide.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 26.—A young man named F. W. Warren, who has been stopping at the Lick House for some time mysteriously disappeared on Monday morning. He left a note addressed to A. W. Thompson, Esq., a well known lawyer, who is the young man's uncle, in which Warren announced his intention to commit suicide, as he had not the wherewith to pay his debts. He also stated his body would probably be found in the bay. He was last seen walking through Chinatown late Monday evening. He was a native of Boston, belonging to an old and aristocratic family. He was about 25 years of age.

Order to Show Cause.

On motion of Henry Leighton, counsel for Rev. C. M. Dawson, in a case wherein he is plaintiff against the Presbytery of San Francisco, Judge Wheeler to-day granted an order for Joseph T. Goodman, manager of the Evening Post, Albert Sutliffe, one of the reporters of that paper, Frederick E. Shearer and Cyrus T. Mills, members of the Presbytery, to show cause on Saturday next, at 10 o'clock, why they should not be adjudged guilty of contempt for having instigated, written, published or procured the publication of abusive articles against Mr Dawson in the Post last Saturday.

Action to Recover Charter Money.

The China, Trans-Pacific S. S. Co. filed a complaint in the fourth district court to-day against the P. M. S. S. Co. to recover $80,911 42 due on the charter by the defendants of the steamships Vasco De Gama and Vancouver for the term of fifteen months.

Avery's Obsequies.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 26.—The preparations of the committee of the Art Association and the military for the obsequies of the late Benjamin P. Avery, this afternoon, are very much deranged through the inclemency of the weather. The funeral services commenced at the First Unitarian church at 2 o'clock this P. M. The casket containing the remains stood in the center of the space in front of the altar covered with bouquets, wreaths and crosses. The front of the altar was draped with the memorial of sorrow which the Chinese government had presented to Mrs Avery in recognition of the high esteem in which the deceased was held by them. This memorial is a piece of blue satin 7 by 24 feet, the Chinese inscription it bears being in gold characters. Over the altar the American and Chinese flags were intertwined. A notable feature in the assemblage was a delegation representing eight Chinese business firms in this city, all of whom were dressed in robes of ceremony. Rev. Horatio Stebbins, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, officiated at the services held at the church, assisted by Rev. A. L. Stone, pastor of the First Congregational Church. After the customary services Dr. Stebbins delivered a eulogy on the deceased, and Henry Edwards read a memorial poem written for the occasion by Daniel O'Connell. The exercises closing with prayer. At the close of the services, the procession formed immediately commenced to fall in line and wended its way to Lone Mountain cemetery. The procession was headed by an imposing military escort, consisting of a detachment of Regular Army and Navy and National Guards, followed by the pall bearers, Major General George H. Vernon, Major General J. McComb, U. S. Collector of Customs Thomas Shannon, U. S. Naval Officer Edwin G. Waite, U. S. Circuit Judge Lorenzo Sawyer, U. S. Circuit Judge Ogden Hoffman, Ex Gov. Fredk F. Low, Ex Gov. H. H. Haight, Mayor A. J. Bryant, Ex Mayor Wm Alvord, U. S. Pay Director John S. Cunningham and Isaac Friedlander, President of the Chamber of Commerce. The hearse bearing the remains was followed by a detachment of United States troops, as body bearers mourners, and persons of the same rank as deceased. Maj Gen John M Schofield U. S. A., commanding military division of the Pacific and staff, Rear Admiral John Rogers, U. S. N., commandant of the Navy yard at Mare Island and staff. Distinguished personages according to rank, the consular corps, the judiciary, and city and county officers, including representatives from the board of supervisors and board of education, representatives of eight Chinese companies, dressed in robes of ceremony, delegates from the chamber of commerce, the Society of California Pioneers, members of the academy of sciences, Art Association; editorial fraternity, Bohemian Club and a long line of citizens in carriages. The casket containing Mr Avery's remains was temporarily interred in the vault of Milton S. Latham. On reaching the tomb prayer was said and a few simple ceremonies held, and the body was consigned to the vault. The rain, which had been falling heavily all day, ceased about the time the exercises at church closed, and on the march to the cemetery the sun shone brightly.

Storms and Interruption of Travel.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 25.—The recent severe rain has caused the blockade of all stage and mail lines. The coast line stages are reported detained near Santa Barbara. The telegraph line of stages was cut off by the Santa Clara river and compelled to return to Andrew station. Above San Fernando on the San Fernando branch railroad, at Cotton branch and Anaheim branch, inquiries are reported. The Santa Monica railroad is under water in places. The sun has shone to-day and the storm seems over for the present. San Francisco mails were sent by the steamer Ancon to-day.

Liabilities of Temple & Workman's Bank.

The official statement of the liabilities of the trustees of Temple & Workman's bank has not yet been made, but it is estimated at about $1,000,000. The property in the hands of the assignee is ample, at a low estimate, to pay the creditors in full, but the process will be a slow one, and if forced, will result in disastrous sacrifices of real estate and injury to the interests of all.

Storm Ended.

SAN DIEGO, Jan 25.—The storm broke up last night, and to-day has been very pleasant. The total rainfall of this storm is about two inches, for the season, six inches. In the interior the amount has been doubled, while at Julian it amounts to over 15 inches. The ground has had a thorough soaking, and there is no doubt of a bountiful harvest and plenty of feed for all kinds of stock.

Snow at Yreka.

YREKA, Jan 25.—Last Sunday, about noon, snow commenced falling and lasted until midnight, covering the ground with about eight inches of snow, which made good sleighing next day, the ground being frozen hard from the effects of the cold weather for the few days preceding. At Scott Mountain the snow was about six feet deep. A large force of men, horses and sleighs are hard at work trying to break the road through and keep communication open between Scott's and Trinity, in which effort the mail contractors between Yreka and Shasta, are sparing no exertions to accomplish. For several days before and since it snowed here, there has been less snow south of us, on the Humbug mountains and Siskiyou. Where the snow usually falls heavily it has not been more than in town, and in the valleys out towards the old Modoc quarters, around the lava beds and battle field, the ground is barely covered, except on the high ridges. In Shasta valley the snow ranges from 12 to 18 inches deep, and in Strawberry valley from three to four feet. There have been great losses of sheep and cattle in this county from the effects of the continued storms this winter, and the cold weather of the past week or two, with the heavy snow storm of last Sunday morning, will make the loss still greater.

Storm Ended—Fine Warm Rains.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Jan. 25.—To-day the clouds have been breaking away and to all appearances the storm which began last Wednesday night, has ceased. Yesterday we had a succession of warm spring showers and the weather continuing very mild the farmers and all others seem happy with such glowing crop prospects. The amount of rain sown is greatly in excess of any previous year and if the season continues at all favorable, the yield will be very large.

Mails all Right Again.

Division Superintendent Taylor of the coast line route arrived from the south to-day with all delayed mails. The mails are moving now in all directions. The small streams are falling rapidly, and with favorable weather, the stages will make time and connection.

Rainfall.

LOS ANGELES, Jan 26.—Total rainfall to date 17 93 inches.

New Steamship Line Proposed.

Last night an important meeting was held at the Pico House called informally with the idea of the organization of a new steamship line, the vessels of which will ply exclusively between Santa Monica and San Francisco. We learn that $250,000 were pledged to the enterprise by persons whose subscriptions are as good as cash. Mr. E. J. Baldwin, who was one of the parties present, distinguished himself by his liberality in subscribing $75,000. Col. R. S. Baker followed suit with $25,000. Altogether, with outside subscriptions already secured, the sum of $250,000 was ascertained to be on hand to start with.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Drowned.

POINT ELLIOT, Jan 26.—It is reported from Snohomish City, this morning, that three boys—named Horace Lowe, Arthur Ball and Clayton Packard—were skating on the lake back of that city yesterday, when the ice broke and Horace Lowe and Arthur Ball were drowned. Clayton Packard narrowly escaped. The two bodies were found last night about 11 o'clock.

OREGON.

A new farmers' warehouse is to be put up at Shedd.

Typhoid fever still prevails through Linn county.

Nearly all the potatoes in Coos county have rotted this winter.

The roads between Marion and Scio are about as bad as they can be.

A series of religious meetings are being held at Scio by Revs. S. F. Miller and Nelson Clark.

A new drug store and wagon shop are to go up at Halsey, besides various other improvements.

The keel of a sail vessel 100 feet long will be laid at North Bend, Coos county, next month.

The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING JAN 27 1876

WHAT OUR STATESMEN ARE DOING AT WASHINGTON

The country is naturally taking a deep interest just now in the question of who is to be the next President The party people are anxious to see the strongest man of their own and the weakest man of the opposing party put on the track The large class who have axes to grind are solicitous for the selection of the particular man who will grind their respective axes best Business men with grievances and they are not a few feel an absorbing interest in the defeat of those to whom they owe or think they owe their misfortunes And the people who think the government should be administered for the good order and happiness of the people at large are desirous of seeing the purest and the wisest statesmen of both parties brought to the front, so that whatever be the result as to parties, it cannot but be well with the country This last class, we are gratified to believe exceeds all the others in numerical and moral strength, though it may not be equal to them in the ability to estimate or the skill to manage the unknown quantities of party politics.

So there is none who does not feel an interest in the business on which Congress appears nearly to be engaged just now the business of President making And yet, important as this great national industry is admitted to be, and deeply as all classes are interested in it, there is reason to believe Congress is bestowing more time and attention to it than is absolutely required of that honorable body and more than the people care to have it bestow. The members of Congress were elected for other service There are a great many things needing attention which the people generally can not attend to, and they could attend to the making of a President with some degree of efficiency without so much assistance from Congress. It is believed very generally that the expenses of the Government are far greater than they need be, and that Congress could by some diligent attention to the details of the public service cut down these expenses very considerably It is agreed on all hands that the civil service is in a wretched plight, and that Congress could reorganize it on an honest and patriotic basis. The currency of the country is upon a sandy foundation, and there is an opinion abroad that some careful legislation is necessary to place it on a solid basis Many parts of the country are suffering from want of attention to the harbor and river improvements which Congress alone is adequate to make Some of the great carrying monopolies grind the faces of the laboring people harder and harder every year, and it is certain that relief must come from Congress or from nowhere

These and other matters, directly affecting the material prosperity and individual welfare of every citizen, could be taken hold of by Congress, but for the want of time; and there would be no want of time were it not that the making of a President consumes the time and absorbs the attention of members But thus far the session has been a constant succession of manœuvers for advantage in the Presidential business Buncombe resolutions and bogus investigations, all having reference to that subject, crowd out legitimate business. Statesmanship is out of the question, and Senate and House are the arena in which politicians wrestle The discussions in Congress and the discussions of Congress by the press are little more than small speculation as to who is likely to gain most advantage in the election of 1876 from this or that move, made by the party leaders Of course the complexion of outside discussion is taken from the character of what occurs in Congress.

It is not to be expected that members of the House or even of the Senate will forget the fact of an approaching Presidential election and give themselves wholly to the high duties of their offices, just as if that fact did not exist It were well for the country if they could, but that is more than ought to be asked of human nature But could they not afford to divide their time with the people and pay some little attention to their proper duties? It is not very creditable to themselves or to the nation, this petty fencing and thrusting They could be in better business, better for themselves, better for the people better for the reputation of their country

MANUFACTURES

When a new industry, requiring the labor of skilled workmen, is established in a community that community is benefited directly by the greater part of the wages of the workmen, who, for the most part will expend their wages in the support of themselves and their families. It will be an increased demand for dwellings and for the various articles of consumption The capitalist investing his money will indirectly be paying rent to landholders, and increasing the business of grocers and dry goods merchants who let houses and sell goods to his workmen A very large portion of the money employed in the new business will be distributed among the people of the place where the manufactory is situated

But this direct profit is usually inconsiderable compared with the indirect benefits which the establishment of a new industry brings to the community in which it is situated. Every business requires the use of articles of trade Every merely new article is little or no trade in the first instance for the manufacturer of these articles is at hand, manufacturers of them will be established in that place and capital will be attracted to the country, and the members of it will receive a profit there from

Let us take the business of shipbuilding now being carried on The materials entering into the construction of a ship are wood, iron, hemp, duck, and many other things of, perhaps, less importance To work up these materials and manufactures of various sorts are required It materials are abundant and the demand for the manufactured articles is likely to be steady capitalists will find it to their advantage to invest their money in establishing manufactories of them here in order to save the cost of bringing them from other places Hence, if ships should be built here every year, manufactories of iron chains, wire rope, capstans, bolts, and other such articles, would soon spring up, as the best kind of iron for this purpose is abundant here Rope walks for the manufacture of cables and other kinds of cordage, and mills for the production of sail cloth would be erected These and many other like institutions would be established here in the course of time requiring the labor of a great number of workmen To apply these men and their families with living clothing and food, houses would have to be built and larger stocks of dry goods and groceries would have to be sold And before long the trade in them would induce clothiers and boot and shoe men to manufacture their goods among us The raw materials—wood, iron, hemp, flax, leather wool and wheat—being manufactured here, would contribute all of their value to the State, instead of helping to build up the wealth of the other States where they are now carried to be worked up and returned to us for sale Our people would get the benefit of the profit which we now have to pay to others, and the general wealth of the State would be just so much increased It is not generally the producing but the manufacturing and carrying trade that grows rich England produces scarcely anything but coal and iron, but her manufacturing and carrying trades have made her the wealthiest nation on the globe It has been asserted that the cheapness of labor in England is the reason why so much wealth has been acquired by the manufacturers of England While this is partly, it is by no means wholly true A little more money is paid here for labor, than there but on the other hand the raw materials are much cheaper with us, and the one excess will nearly, if not quite, equal the other. As a proof of this, American cotton goods are sold in the English markets at the same price as English goods, which could not be done if the cost of production in America, including the cost of material, were greater than in England

We, in Oregon, possess the raw materials in abundance We have water power and fuel, we have money, too at least enough for a start And there is no good reason why Oregon should not soon become one of the foremost manufacturing and consequently, one of the richest States in the Union

A PIECE OF SAN FRANCISCO GEOGRAPHY

If one only had the making of the geographies, how easily one could make his town the centre of the terrestrial universe! This profound reflection is caused by a glance at what purports to be a map of the world, which we find in the San Francisco Journal of Commerce, showing the commercial connections of San Francisco By the narrowing of a sea here and the widening of a continent there or the gently curving a coast line in another place it is easy to make it plain that San Francisco is just as near the focus of all the geographical influences that are supposed to affect the commerce of the world as it is possible to fix that very important point We do not say this has been done in drawing the map referred to That we leave for inference, giving a single fact which will be quickly understood by our readers, and leaving them to their own conjectures as to the probable faithfulness of this projection of the Earth's surface. Astoria, Oregon City and Salem are marked on the map as nearly correctly as might reasonably be expected in a representation so general as a map of the whole world must be So is Lewiston, Idaho Then Portland is located on the north side of Snake river just about the same distance below Lewiston as Oregon City is below Salem on the Willamet.

A special request is made of the friends and correspondents of the Journal of Commerce who receive the number containing this map, that they acknowledge the receipt of it. We trust this notice will be regarded as sufficient acknowledgment by the OREGONIAN, and if it would not be asking too much we should request the Journal of Commerce to acknowledge the injustice it does our city and State by the astonishing blunder it has made Wherever the Journal's map goes the situation of Portland will be misunderstood, and that greatly to her disadvantage We hope every paper in the State will give the benefit of its circulation to a correction of this misrepresentation

THE NEW OREGON SHIP

The following report was made by the committee appointed for that purpose which met at the office of Messrs Ladd & Tilton yesterday afternoon

The committee appointed to review the model and working drawings of a ship of about 1,000 tons (old measurement) which is proposed to have constructed for the Oregon Shipowners Company beg to report that they have carefully investigated the same and find that the sizes of all timbers and fastenings fully come up to the requirements of the French Lloyd's association that the ship is well designed and that her model for carrying and speed meet our approval We have also gone over the items of material and labor and report that in our judgment the cost of the vessel complete, will not exceed the sum of $85,000 U S gold coin Signed

C O HILLIARD
M S BURRELL
WALTER MORRILL Com

We are informed that the subscription list for the new ship will be placed before merchants on Monday or Tuesday

The estimates have been made carefully even to the smallest details and although the sum of $85,000 has been fixed upon as the maximum cost there is every reason to believe that the final price of the vessel will not exceed $80,000 and possibly a little less than that figure. The contract is proposed but Hon C H Parker has much preferred to furnish all the requisite lights and mast the construction for a fixed amount All materials will be supplied by the actual cost but the stockholders are to see that the vessel will get the full value for the money and will use as good and cheap materials as can be found in any of our Atlantic ports

The St Paul Press discusses the claims of various localities in Indiana for the location of Blaine Hayes Judge Washburne and Bill Allen on the republican side and Hendricks Tilden Allen Pendleton Thurman and a dozen others of the Democrats and concludes that Bristow has the best show for the Republican nomination and Tilden for that of the Democrats

Murat Halstead, editor of the Cincinnati Commercial, says he will not support Grant for a third term, no matter who is nominated against him It occurs to us that Mr Halstead is placing unnecessary limits on himself It is hardly likely he will support any body unless it may be Grant, no matter who is nominated against him

Ben Butler having been announced as the orator for the Centennial Fourth of July at Lowell, Massachusetts, an exchange takes occasion to say that the selection is eminently proper as Ben is at present probably the greatest Fourth of July man in America

The St Paul Press thinks legislative bodies should be small for the reason that twelve men would do as much business in one day as forty men would in six or eighteen men in two Then give us the forty men and the two days

An exchange remarks that Governor Gaston of Massachusetts has won a respectable reputation in a small field We move to adjourn It should have said he has won a small reputation in a respectable field

CITY.

VISIT TO WONDERLAND.—Mr R Cullen White, the well known actor and scenic artist, is to lecture at New Market Theater ... evening, taking for his subject "A Visit to Wonderland." Mr White visited several years ago that portion of the United States known as the "Great National Park" situated in the Yellowstone valley, where he spent about two months in exploring the mysteries and beauties of that truly wonderful region. While sojourning there Mr White made a number of sketches, which he has transmitted to canvas in an artistic manner. These views are about 9x7 feet and will be used by the speaker in illustrating some of the most prominent natural wonders of the "National Park." During the entertainment Mr White will give graphic descriptions of Mammoth Hot Springs, Upper Fall, Mud Volcano, Cleopatra's Bath, Tower Creek Falls, The Lake, Grand Fall Canyon and Upper and Lower Firehole Basins, Geysers or Spouting Springs, The Mammoth, Old Faithful, The Giantess, The Beehive, The Giant, The Grotto, Mud Puffs. Besides the lecture and panoramic views a number of original poems will be recited by a professional reader. Mr White is a gentleman of considerable literary culture and taste and the entertainment gives assurance of being interesting, pleasing and instructive.

CULPABLE NEGLIGENCE.—Chief Engineer Lyon, while inspecting the chimney flues in the Chinese quarters, on the east side of Front street, between Oak and Pine, the other day noticed that in many instances the stove-pipes were placed through their wooden partitions unprotected by either tin or sheet iron ... places the pipes were seen to protrude through a window through a broken pane of glass. Chief Lyon notified the denizens of the district that they must comply with the requirements of the ordinance and observe all precautions that unless they immediately corrected the existing abuses he should order their arrest. When Mr. Lyon began to talk business to the Johns, they instantly "caved" and promised to make the necessary alterations to their domiciles. In view of the highly combustible character of the buildings inhabited by these celestials it is really to be wondered at that the whole block has not been destroyed by fire long ere the present.

A DOUBLE RUNAWAY.—Yesterday forenoon a horse attached to an express wagon, started up Fourth street from the intersection of Washington. Coming to Alder, the animal ran full tilt against a lamp post which stood near the Baptist church, and smashed it off level with the sidewalk. Notwithstanding efforts were made to stop the animal, it dashed up Fourth beyond Madison street. A vendor of lacteal fluid was coming down Fourth street beyond St. Helen's Hall and seeing the frightened horse coming toward him, he leaped out and abandoned his own team. As a natural result, the milkman's team took fright and started up Jefferson street, followed by the other frightened animal. Both teams were ... tracks for Washington county when last seen and where they were overhauled we are not able to say.

NEWS UP THE COLUMBIA.—Postmaster Cole telegraphed to the Postmaster General several days ago for instructions as to how to proceed in regard to conveying the mails to and from the Dalles during the temporary suspension of navigation, as the O S N Co's contract only required them to carry the mails to and fro "by boat." As yet Mr. Cole has received no response from the Department in regard to the matter. Meantime the public are the sufferers. However the recent very great moderation in the temperature leads to the hope of a speedy clearing of the upper river and the resumption of navigation.

GONE TO UMPQUA.—Mr James Lotan, United States inspector of boilers, started for the mouth of the Umpqua river Tuesday morning on official business. Some time ago a new steamer was constructed at the mouth of the Umpqua, and properly inspected by Mr Lotan and Capt. Flanders. Since then some new machinery has been placed in the steamer, so it became necessary for Mr Lotan to inspect the boiler again. He will return to-morrow.

A TROPHY.—The Willamette fire company has a ... of gold in the shape of a shield and appropriately engraved with the name of the company and the recipients, A R Church and Louis Favre, are attracting much attention in the window of Henri Isch's jewelry store. The two badges ordered by Engineer Everson of that company, through a San Francisco house are expected next week.

OFFICERS ELECTED.—Thursday evening the Catholic Literary Society elected the following officers: President, W J Kelly; Vice President, F. Sheedy; Secretary, H C Funk; Treasurer, E. Higgins; Editor, J R Wiley; Critic, R. O White. The society meets at the Catholic Library rooms, every Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

BOILER ORDERED.—A short time since the Willamette Iron Works were awarded the contract for making a boiler which is to be used on the new steamer which was recently ordered from Capt. Buchanan by the O S N Co. The necessary iron has been ordered from San Francisco and work will soon commence.

COMPLETED HIS WORK.—Sheriff Tozier of Washington county, closed his books at the Central hotel yesterday after having interviewed about two thirds of those here who are taxpayers in Washington county. Those who failed to see him can communicate with Mr Tozier at Hillsboro.

CENTENNIAL BOARD MEETING.—This morning at 10 o'clock the Centennial Board will meet at the St Charles Hotel to complete arrangements for the proper disposition of the goods on hand and to arrive, and to attend to other matters that may come before the board.

MEETING OF G A R.—There will be a regular monthly meeting and installation of officers, besides other important business to transact, of Baker and Canby Post G A R this evening. A full attendance is desired.

VANCOUVER MAIL.—The mail carrier came over from Vancouver yesterday afternoon with mail and returned immediately with a full sack. He reported the Columbia river full of floating ice, though navigable for a small boat.

WEATHER UP THE COLUMBIA.

Telegrams from up ... received yesterday indicate that the weather was as follows at the several points named last evening, at 6 o'clock:

Wallula—Little cloudy, thermometer 8, river full of running ice.

Dalles—Cloudy, thermometer 1°.

Cascades—Cloudy, wind from south, thermometer 35°.

Umatilla—Clear, no wind, thermometer 13°.

Celilo—Weather clear, no wind, thermometer, 24°, river fell one inch to day.

ARREST OF ALLEGED MAILROBBERS.

Our readers will recollect that in the summer of 1872 the stage coming from Canyon City to the Dalles was stopped at Antelope Canyon, Wasco county, by three highwaymen and robbed of the U S mail. A D Edgar the driver of the stage came on, gave the alarm and a few days after four men, Frank Tompkins, M J Hanson, W H Bramlette and J W White were arrested, tried in the U S district court by jury, convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for life. At the time it was strongly contended by these men and their friends that they were innocent of the crime and efforts were made to secure their pardon but their efforts were unsuccessful. About two months ago a warrant was issued by Commissioner Wilcox for the arrest of three men, Milton Shepardson alias Matthews, Charles Darnell and T D Phelps and placed in the hands of Dr J M Boyd for service, who arrested Phelps at Dayton W T about the 5th of this month. He was brought to this city and told to the commissioner and the U S attorney a story to the effect that he, Shepardson and Darnell had committed the robbery and divided the proceeds. Dr Boyd and Marshal Malarkey started then to California for Shepardson and Darnell and yesterday a dispatch was received stating that he (Boyd) left Colusa Cal yesterday morning with Shepardson all right. Phelps has resided since a month or so after the robbery was committed at or near Dayton W T, where he married into a respectable family. Shepardson is not a youth to fortune and to fame unknown." We are informed by one of the attorneys who defended Tompkins and the others tried with him that Shepardson has been going through the court machinery of California for two years last past, for robbing Wells Fargo & Co's express in Shasta county. He was arrested in Eastern Oregon in 1873 and taken to California tried and convicted twice on this charge, but each time was granted a new trial in the supreme court and on the third trial about two months ago was cleared. He was arrested immediately on a requisition from the Governor of this State to answer an indictment found against him in Baker county, for robbing the stage there but was released by Gov Pacheco withdrawing his order for arrest upon the ground that Shepardson had been taken to California in custody and could not be arrested as a fugitive from justice, at least, until he had an opportunity to come back to Oregon voluntarily which opportunity Dr Boyd will now afford him to come free of expense. Little is known of Darnell. Phelps was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,500. He furnished the required bonds and was released.

BRIEF NOTES.

The steamer Idaho will sail this evening for San Francisco.

Prospects of an early opening of navigation on the Upper Columbia.

Still nothing from the ship Prince Umberto, which has been reported disabled.

This evening the Progress Club will give one of their fashionable and select parties at the rooms.

The piles driven at the railroad ferry landing are being securely braced and fastened together.

The steamer Ajax was lying at Astoria yesterday morning. She probably went to sea in the afternoon.

The steamer Dixie Thompson encountered considerable ice in coming up the river yesterday from Astoria.

Passengers for San Francisco via Victoria will leave the city on the Fanny Hayward on Wednesday, 2d prox.

The ship City of Tyre now lies at Flanders wharf in a dismasted condition. She is having her rigging overhauled.

The following vessels are now lying along the lower docks: City of Tyre, Ophelia, Santon, Cameo and steamer Idaho.

One solitary case in police court yesterday morning. Tom Smith, for vagrancy, was committed to the city jail for five days.

The dwelling house on the northeast corner of Morrison and Fifth streets is being remodeled for business purposes. This is pushing business west, certainly.

SEATTLE ITEMS.

Mat. Keith, well known in Portland, has opened a saloon here.

Messrs Hurford & Francis, both of Portland have established a musical store in Seattle.

On this (Tuesday) evening an old folks concert will be given in aid of the Presbyterian church by some of the amateur musicians of Seattle. One of the features of the entertainment will be Old Grimes, given by H L Yesler. A large attendance is expected.

We have had some skating. The last four days have been very cold and the north wind cuts uncomfortably deep. Through the days the sun shines warmly and partially thaws out the frozen ground, but when it sets everything congeals again. The snow which fell some days since, is yet visible in many places.

The railroad from the Renton mine (a distance of some six miles), to the Duwamish river has just been completed. This will enable both the Renton and Talbot coal companies to transport their coal to Seattle at the rate of from 80 to 100 tons daily. These companies as also the Seattle Co are constantly improving their facilities of production and transportation, so that within the year it is safe to say that twice as much coal will be shipped from this place as at the present time.

The district court is in session here now—convening on Monday morning. There is a full docket to be disposed of, though none of very great importance. Quite a stir was created in the court room by an order of Judge Lewis laying any person liable to a fine who should whisper during the sitting of the court. Two attorneys were fined for this offense but on the following morning their fines were remitted. The judge stated that his reasons for this anomalous proceeding were that he wished to protect the attorneys from interruption while pleading a cause, and to protect and properly maintain the dignity of the court. The ruling does not apply to attorneys employed in the same case and their clients. There is no mistaking his honor's intention of properly maintaining order. K. W.

DELUDED BY SPIRITS.

RESULTS OF A REMARKABLE HALLUCINATION—TWO YOUNG MEN FROM OREGON ATTEMPT TO CALL SPIRITS FROM THE VASTY DEEP, BUT THEY DON'T OBEY, WHEREAT THEY COURT THE MUSE AND SUBSISTING ON THIS DIET NOT A SUCCESS.

It seems that two young men hailing from Oregon have recently become residents of San Jose, California, and by their singular and truly unaccountable conduct have created no small sensation in that town. These young men are twin brothers and their names are respectively Alonzo and Lorenzo Pike. They ... several months ago to the residence of Dr A O Hooker, who resides on San Fernando street, San Jose. The appearance of the brothers it is said was prepossessing, and in point of intelligence they seemed far above the average. They were the exact counterpart of each other—the resemblance being very close in point of dress, height, features voice and manner. Formerly the Pike brothers came from Iowa, but they had lived several years in this State, where they followed the avocation of school teaching.

They engaged a room of Dr Hooker, saying in exchange and though rent should have been in advance they did not offer to pay and nothing on that subject was mentioned until the week was up when the doctor paid them a business visit. They informed him that they had no money but were expecting some in a few days. At the end of another week the matter was again broached and the same answer returned. Things ran along in this way for some two months. No money was forthcoming and the doctor, who is charitably disposed and who withal saw that something was troubling their minds did not press them. Their clothes began to look shabby and cheeks to grow hollow and emaciated. The doctor at length paid them a visit to their room in order if possible to learn their cause. He asked them if they had enough to eat. An affirmative answer was returned. They said that they were amply provided for and wanted for nothing. Days passed, which told perceptibly upon their appearance. He was not satisfied with their statement and again and again endeavored to draw them out so as to befriend them but the unvarying reply was that they were provided for and needed no assistance. One day one of them was taken sick. The doctor learned the fact and asked his wife to make some toast. She did so, and he took it up to their room but neither wanted it. The brother, who was able to be around, said that he understood the other's condition and everything would come out all right. So matters ran on until both commenced to keep their room. The doctor asked the cause and was told that they wanted to be let alone. On the second visit one brother told the doctor that the other who was abed was under the influence of spirits, and absolute quiet and solitude was necessary. A friend of the doctor's who had a slight acquaintance with the brothers was informed of the state of affairs and he went up to see them in order if possible to arrive at their condition, etc. He was informed that they were all right and as far as money was concerned they expected a remittance in a few days. Afterward Dr Hooker's mother in law paid them a visit and after persistent trial made the brother who was on his feet acknowledge that since the first week after their arrival at the house—a period of over two months—they had eaten nothing but apples! His brother, he said, was in a trance and would write a book similar to Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress that they had been dictated by spirits to come there and ... the experiences they had undergone. Once when they couldn't get apples he had taken two bits from the lady's trunk and bought a supply. She asked him why he did not take more money and buy something more substantial or why he had not informed the family of the situation but the answer was that they did not want anything else and it was all right. At length Dr Hooker informed Judge Payne of their situation who visited the brothers in company with Dr Hovet. An examination was had but nothing satisfactory was arrived at. On Tuesday Jan 3d the strange pair went to bed early. For some days previously the unwell one had been in an unconscious state, and now the other appeared to be in a similar situation. On the 5th of Jan Dr Hovet was called in who said they would die unless something was done. Dr Hooker then hunted up Dr Cory, the county physician, and at noon they were taken to the Infirmary still in an unconscious state. Whether they will live or die is an open question. After their departure Dr Hooker found a letter in their room from their mother in Iowa dated June 8th. She wrote cheerfully and said she expected them home in June next. The case is a very strange one. There was nothing in their looks or manner to indicate insanity and on all subjects except religious or spiritual ones they conversed rationally. For some time prior to their removal to the hospital Dr Hooker found them often praying with great earnestness. A scrap book of original poetry left behind in the till ... the possession of a considerable amount of the divine afflatus. Their age is 23 years.

Needless Suffering.

Many persons of weakly constitution with dyspeptic and bilious tendencies suffer life long, both by distress unnecessarily. Their existences are commonly shorter than those of healthier mortals but while they last it is usually the case that they are continually dosing themselves or being dosed to no purpose. Could they be induced to use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for a while, strength regained, digestion restored and the disappearance of bilious symptoms would readily acquaint them with the difference between a remedy which deals with the causes and those which affect symptoms merely. Not only are the Bitters a searching specific for complaints affecting the stomach, liver or intestinal canal, but they are in consequence of their invigorative and ... influence upon the physique an admirable ... the system against the ... influences which beget malarial disease.

Neglected Coughs and Colds—Few are aware of the importance of checking a cough or common cold in its first stage ... in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy ... if neglected, often works upon the lungs.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Wide Awake sends the following under date of the 25th:

Skating has become a thing of the past—a south wind playing havoc with the ice.

Our new court house is fully repaired, there being no traces left of the recent conflagration.

Dr Belt has already commenced rebuilding on the grounds where his former residence recently stood.

R H Price, our newly appointed street commissioner, is kept busy repairing the damages caused by the recent high water.

Hon P L Willis contemplates giving up the practice of law and entering extensively into the stock business in Eastern Oregon.

Silk nites are becoming thoroughly aroused on the subject of sewerage and drainage. It is surely time something was done in this line.

The Chinese New Year was generally observed by the Mongolians in this city although very little enthusiasm prevailed among them.

A number of ladies were out canvassing yesterday for edibles for the firemen's social to be given in Reed's Opera House next Friday evening.

Hon W R Dunbar is lecturing on temperance and visiting the various Good Templar lodges in Lane county during the present week.

Rev J S Knight, of the Congregational church, is favoring his congregation with a series of Sunday evening lectures, interesting in the extreme.

The remains of Robt H Byles were escorted to the depot by a large concourse of students and a committee from the Alka Society accompanied the remains home.

The Episcopal social to be held at the residence of Dr Belt, on Thursday evening promises to be an unusually pleasant affair, the house being large and the host and hostess popular. Every friend of the church is invited to be present.

Howard G Morris, teacher of the North Salem public school, whom rumor has had dead several times, is, we are pleased to announce somewhat better this morning, with faint hopes of his recovery. Mr Lastham has temporary charge of Mr Morris school during his illness.

THE TERRITORIES.

Seattle will have its celebration of the national holiday in style.

The Snohomish Athenaeum acknowledges contributions of Pterocrostalumbos, Olive por phylis, Ampullaria Globosa, and Pectin plita, whatever those things may be.

During the week ending January 16th 2 100,000 feet of saw logs were taken to the Port Gamble mills by the steamers Yakima and Cyrus Walker from the Snohomish lumbering region.

Twelve years ago only about ten million feet of saw logs were annually cut on the Snohomish river. In 1875 the Snohomish Star estimates the quantity to have been not less than forty million feet. In 1871 the cut was sixteen million feet and in 1872 twenty-six millions. The price obtained in 1863 was say three dollars and three and a half a thousand; while in 1875 it was five and five and a half. Twenty years hence the editor is of the opinion that the Snohomish river will be the outlet for eighty or a hundred million feet of saw logs annually.

The Washington Territory Branch of the Alliance Mutual Life Insurance Company of the United States was organized in Seattle yesterday by the election of officers, an executive committee and a board of trustees. Daniel Bagley was elected president and I Pothemus secretary.

MY SUMMER FRIEND

With [illegible] of the summer was beaming
[illegible]
But when storms rose and lightnings were gleaming
She was off for some happier land

Or we would think by the words that she told me
In the glow of the sweets summer's prime
That this touch of fine feathers ad [illegible]
To doubt her would seem quite a crime

But wait till the clouds of December
Gather gusty and gloomy and gray
And believe me you then will remember
[illegible] as she wings her way

[illegible] there creeps a deplorable feeling
Through the bosom and over the brain
As we witness the false one thus stealing
Away in the moments of pain

We grieve that the hopes we once cherished
Prove phantoms that cheer us in dreams
And regret to lose hope that has perished
Ah how few persons are what they seem

Who but sighs as life s autumn advances
As its flowers and verdure soon fade
One could weep as he thoughtlessly glances
At the past, and its fair friendships decayed

WORCESTON Va Dec 31 1875

THE TONSORIAL FIEND

He thought he recognized me the moment I entered the door but I refused to encourage him in that belief It was a strange town to me all the people were strangers, and I was so far from home that I doubted if man, woman or child in that locality had ever met me before

The barber smiled tenderly as he pointed to the chair, and then led right off as familiarly as if he had shaved me every day for a month past While mixing the lather, he remarked on the weather, the crops, the panic, the lost balloonist and other matters and although I did not pretend to hear him, he was not to be beaten

"I hope you ll do well here," he said, as he pushed my head over and daubed the lather on my right cheek, commencing at the hud of the ear

[Silence on my part]

This town needs another dry goods store he continued after a moment, and I shouldn t wonder if you just coined money

[Long silence]

Perhaps it was the silence that convinced the barber that he had made a mistake but he was not discouraged As he bathed the left cheek he suddenly said

"There are three or four lawyers here now, but, as Christopher Columbus said There s room at the top of the heap,' and I think you will be full of business all the time."

He was looking right down into my face and through the foam of lather he might have detected a faint smile, a frown, or some other expression which hurt his conceit He instantly suspected that he had made another mistake I was looking into the glass on the wall, and I saw his countenance change Some barbers would not have pushed the subject further, but he was the only barber in the village, and he felt that he had certain rights that I was bound to respect He might have reasoned that I was mulish and obstinate, and needed coaxing and flattering, or perhaps he theorized that I was timid and hesitating and wanted encouraging. At any rate he attacked me again, saying

"This is a nice village, but I never saw so much sickness in all my life as we have had this year. Our doctors don t seem to know enough to manage the diseases, and I am glad you are going to open an office. I am pretty healthy as a general thing, but if I get sick I'll give you my custom in preference to any one else."

Still watching the glass I saw a self satisfied smile ripple across his face. For about half a minute he was dead sure in his own mind that he had boxed me up

Then again a shade of suspicion crossed his face. Silence sometimes gives consent, but in this case, after scrutinizing my face sharply for an instant he interpreted it to be that he had blundered again He was vexed I had no right to sit there and treat his round cornered queries with such contemptuous silence. He would pay me for such conduct I saw the spirit of resolve creep into his face, and he said

"I was saying only the other day that this town was able to support another blacksmith shop Old Jones is good hearted, but he knows no more about shoeing a horse than a 'coon does about sailing a canal boat

His eyes glistened and he took no pains to keep down the chuckle of satisfaction bubbling up in his throat He regarded it as a line shot—a crusher—and if he hadn t been shaving my chin at that time he would have been unable to suppress a laugh

His razor crossed the chin and scraped up and down and skipped around to the jugular vein before the barber s smile faded He had been watching to catch a smile of surprise or look of displeasure or something to guide his opinion, and as he had been unsuccessful he renewed the lather on the left check and sighed drearily I hoped he was a man of determination, and trusted that he would not give up Fearing that he would I was about to speak, when he smiled blandly and remarked

"I can tell a school teacher the minute I set my eyes on him!"

[Lather and shave]

"Well, I suppose teaching is a good paying business," he went on, as he looked my face over to see if he had skipped a spot— and I'm willing to help him all I can I haven't any children—am not married—but if ever I get married and have children, I ll send them to you"

His persistency and flattery deserved some encouragement, but I was determined to hold out to the last ditch He shut up his razor with a quick, vexed motion, tossed it on the stand regardless of damages and he smiled maliciously as he got down his bottle of adulterated bay rum I knew that it would bite like a serpent and sting like an adder but could I show less stoicism than he had shown diplomacy and persistency? Didn t I commence the struggle?

I shut my teeth and looked straight into the glass and he soaped the fiery stuff over my cheeks and chin He expected a squirm and a yell and his surprise was great The light of revenge had crept into his eyes but it quickly faded away and as he replaced the bottle and wiped my face with the towel, he said

"I never saw but one man who could stand bay rum like that and he was a returned Californian The climate of that country hardens the flesh I suppose

I refused to reply He got angry again during my scalp as he combed my hair gave my head several unnecessary twists and knocks and pulls and then jerked the calico apron off my lap as if he hated me However curiosity finally overcame his vexation of spirit and as he brushed me off he said

This town ought to support another undertaker [illegible] if I can be of any assistance in finding [illegible] you can call upon me day or night

I wouldn t speak and I heard him gritting his teeth He also struck me several hard blows with the brush, and once tried to [illegible] me fair in the nose I thought I had [illegible] courage him but just as I put on my hat and opened the door he made a last desperate charge Smiling sweetly he inquired

"I see you Reverend—reverend—what did you say it was Reverend Mr Brown?

I didn t say

TWEED S FIFTH AVENUE RETREAT

Reference has frequently been made to Tweed s relations to a certain Mrs McMullen residing on the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty fourth street where it was supposed he was from time to time hiding. It has been for years notorious that relations of a very intimate character existed between the great Democrat [illegible] and this woman who has been enriched by him and to whom he made over a part of his property An old chum of Tweed gives me a little history of Tweed s intrigues with women and his relations to this woman Many years ago while school commissioner [illegible] he made the acquaintance of a pretty school teacher named Garrett [illegible] under his protection For years she was it is alleged, his mistress but one day Tweed saw Mrs McMullen, and smitten with her fine physique he longed for fresh fields and new pastures How to get rid of the Garrett woman was what puzzled him He had as one of his political supporters the same Tom Field who subsequently became celebrated as a ring thief and who is now a fugitive in Canada This fellow had married into the family of a very respectable retired builder named Smith, and won thereby one of the noblest women of the metropolis She was abused by him until finally she obtained a divorce After various intrigues Field capped the climax of his infamy by debauching the daughter of his own sister This was the dirty fellow who came to Tweed s rescue and for a consideration he took Miss Garrett off the Boss hands and ever afterward remained a tool of Tweed until his [illegible] in the legislature Tweed took Mrs McMullen all to himself and kept up the [illegible] he was committed to Blackwell s Island was her devoted lover It is even declared that when in prison he was allowed to visit her She has been made a party in the civil suits by the State and it is believed that after his escape he spent at least one night at her house Miss Garrett his discarded mistress it is said is still living with Field in Montreal where loquacious Tom is a clerk in a tobacco warehouse It is notorious that Miss Garrett owns considerable property which it is believed was purchased with money stolen from the city —N Y Cor Cincinnati Enquirer

LAND FOR IMMIGRANTS,

Choice Farms for Sale.

4,000 ACRES, IN QUANTITIES TO SUIT PURCHASERS.

230 ACRES DUE SOUTH AND ADJOINING the Railroad Depot at Salem all under cultivation and suitable for grain or vegetables

2045 ACRES four miles southeast of Salem on the railroad with Mill creek running through it. This is the choicest farming land in Marion county with fine springs consisting in part of the old Rector donation claim on which I raised the present year fifty bushels of wheat and three tons of timothy per acre The first crop of oats ever raised on part of this land measured ninety four bushels per acre grain weighed and ground chained by Mr Alfred Stanton of Salem

1,700 ACRES of prairie and light brush land with timber for farming purposes bounded by the Willamette river for four miles beautiful lake on the east boat landings all along the river commencing four miles north of Salem—all choice grain land—the largest and most suitable body of land to be found in the Willamette valley to be purchased by a colony To be sold from $15 to $25 per acre This land will all be immediately surveyed and can be sold in larger or smaller parcels to suit purchasers. It can be subdivided to the best possible advantage and I can offer any person or persons or colony of persons desiring to purchase homes in the best part of the Willamette valley near the city of Salem and within reach of the best social advantages as well as most favorably located with respect to markets greater advantages on more favorable terms than they ever expect to realize again

That [illegible] the faith [illegible]
[illegible] would seem quite a crime

But wait till the clouds of December
Gather only all gloomy and gray
[illegible] you that will remember
[illegible] as the wings her way

[illegible] a feeling
[illegible] the bosom and over the brain
[illegible] is stealing
Away in the obsequies of pain

We grieve that the hopes we once cherished
Prove phantoms that cheer us in dreams
And regret to lose hope that has perished
[illegible] few persons are what they seem

Who but sighs as life's autumn advances
As its flowers and verdure soon fade
One could weep as he thoughtfully glances
At the past and o'er friendships decayed

THE TONSORIAL FIEND

He thought he recognized me the moment I entered the door but I refused to encourage him in that belief It was a strange town to me all the people were strangers, and I was so far from home that I doubted if man, woman or child in that locality had ever met me before

The barber smiled tenderly as he pointed to the chair, and then led right off as familiarly as if he had shaved me every day for a month past While mixing the lather, he remarked on the weather, the crops, the panic the lost balloonist and other matters and although I did not pretend to hear him he was not to be beaten

"I hope you'll do well here," he said, as he pushed my head over and daubed the lather on my right cheek, commencing at the butt of the ear

[Silence on my part]

This town needs another drygoods store he continued after a moment and I don't [illegible] wonder if you just coined money

[Long silence]

Perhaps it was the silence that convinced the barber that he had made a mistake but he was not discouraged As he bathed the left cheek he suddenly said

There are three or four lawyers here now but, as Christopher Columbus said There is room at the top of the heap,' and I think you will be full of business all the time'

He was looking right down into my face and through the foam of lather he might have detected a faint smile, a frown, or some other expression which hurt his conceit He instantly suspected that he had made another mistake I was looking into the glass on the wall, and I saw his countenance change Some barbers would not have pushed the subject further, but he was the only barber in the village, and he felt that he had certain rights that I was bound to respect He might have reasoned that I was mulish and obstinate, and needed coaxing and flattering, or perhaps he theorized that I was timid and hesitating and wanted encouraging. At any rate he attacked me again, saying

"This is a nice village, but I never saw so much sickness in all my life as we have had this year Our doctors don't seem to know enough to manage the diseases, and I am glad you are going to open an office. I am pretty healthy as a general thing, but if I get sick I'll give you my custom in preference to any one else"

Still watching the glass I saw a self satisfied smile ripple across his face. For about half a minute he was dead sure in his own mind that he had boxed me up

Then again a shade of suspicion crossed his face Silence sometimes gives consent but in this case, after scrutinizing my face sharply for an instant he interpreted it to be that he had blundered again He was vexed I had no right to sit there and treat his round cornered queries with such contemptuous silence He would pay me for such conduct I saw the spirit of resolve creep into his face and he said

"I was saying only the other day that this town was able to support another blacksmith shop. Old Jones is good hearted, but he knows no more about shoeing a horse than a 'coon does about sailing a canal boat

His eyes glistened and he took no pains to keep down the chuckle of satisfaction bubbling up in his throat He regarded it as a line shot—a crusher—and if he hadn't been shaving my chin at that time he would have been unable to suppress a laugh

His razor crossed the chin and scraped up and down and skipped around to the jugular vein before the barber's smile faded He had been watching to catch a smile of surprise or look of displeasure or something to guide his opinion, and as he had been unsuccessful he renewed the lather on the left cheek and sighed drearily. I hoped he was a man of determination and trusted that he would not give up Fearing that he would I was about to speak, when he smiled blandly and remarked

"I can tell a school teacher the minute I set my eyes on him"

[Lather and shave]

"Well I suppose teaching is a good paying business," he went on, as he looked my face over to see if he had skipped a spot— and I'm willing to help him all I can I haven't any children—am not married—but if ever I get married and have children, I'll send them to you"

His persistency and flattery deserved some encouragement, but I was determined to hold out to the last ditch He shut up his razor with a quick, vexed motion tossed it on the stand regardless of damages, and he smiled maliciously as he got down his bottle of adulterated bay rum I knew that it would bite like a serpent and sting like an adder but could I show less stoicism than he had shown diplomacy and persistency? Didn't I commence the struggle?

I set my teeth and looked straight into the glass until he soaped the fiery stuff over my cheeks and [illegible] He expected a squirm and a yell and his surprise was great The light of revenge had crept into his eyes but it quickly faded away and as he replaced the bottle and wiped my face with the towel he said

I never saw but one man who could stand bay rum like that and he was a returned Californian The climate of that country hardens the flesh I suppose

I refused to reply He got angry again dug my scalp as he combed my hair gave my [illegible] several unnecessary twists and knocks and then jerked the cloth off [illegible] as if he hated me However [illegible] his vexation [illegible] and brushed me off he said

[illegible] to support another [illegible] any assistance [illegible]

I [illegible] and I [illegible] at him [illegible]

TWEED'S FIFTH AVENUE RETREAT

[illegible] has frequently been made to Tweed's relations to a certain Mrs McMullen, residing on the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty fourth street where [illegible] It has been for years notorious that relations of a very intimate character existed between the great Democratic [illegible] and this woman who has been enriched by him and to whom he made over a part of his property An old chum of Tweed's [illegible] in the Tweed [illegible] intimacy [illegible] woman [illegible] this [illegible] woman's school [illegible] acquaintance [illegible] Garrett [illegible] his protection For years she was it is alleged, his mistress but one day Tweed saw Mrs McMullen and smitten with her fine physique he longed for fresh fields and new pastures How to get rid of the Garrett woman was what puzzled him He had as one of his political supporters the same Tom Field who subsequently became celebrated as a ring thief and who is now a fugitive in Canada This fellow had married into the family of a very respectable retired builder named Smith and won thereby one of the noblest women of the metropolis She was abused by him and finally she obtained a divorce After various intrigues Field capped the climax of his infamy by debauching the daughter of his own sister This was the dirty fellow who came to Tweed's rescue, and for a consideration he took Miss Garrett off the Boss hands and ever afterward remained a tool of Tweed and his henchman in the legislature Tweed took Mrs McMullen all to himself and kept her up to the time he was committed Blackwell's Island was her devoted lover It is even hinted that when in prison he was allowed to visit her She has been made a party in the civil suits by the State and it is believed that after his escape he spent at least one night at her house Miss Garrett his discarded mistress it is said is still living with Field in Montreal where Tom is a clerk in a tobacco warehouse It is notorious that Miss Garrett owns considerable property which it is believed was purchased with money stolen from the city —N Y Cor Cincinnati Enquirer
